FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

THE CHAPLAIN SCHOOL

BY CHAPLAIN (COL.) JOSEPH R. KOCH

WHEREVER soldiers or airmen are found, chaplains minister to their religious needs. The wounded G.I. in the aid station and the garrison soldier or airman both know that when they need an understanding friend, they can turn to the chaplain. A soldier who serves God by helping his fellow soldiers, the chaplain has won an honored place in the traditions of the military service.

The chaplain's effectiveness as a clergyman with the Armed Forces is due in great measure to the training he receives at The Chaplain School. The school takes the newly recruited chaplain, fresh from civilian life, and prepares him to serve the specialized needs of the military community. It also takes the reserve chaplain veteran of World War II, in civilian status since the close of the war, and prepares him for a return to extended active duty.

The program of The Chaplain School is built around one idea—service to the chaplains of the Army and Air Force. It aims to help them accomplish their missions effectively in the field. As one graduate put it, "The school showed me what my job is and then told me how to tackle it."

The Chaplain School was moved from Carlisle Barracks, Pa., to Ft. Slocum, N. Y., in April of this year. In its new location it has at its disposal facilities far superior to any that it has possessed in its 33 years of existence. With almost four times the amount of space available we hope to do a better job than ever before in the training of chaplains.

Our increased facilities permit us to establish a model religious center which will be used as a laboratory work-shop for student chaplains. This center will contain everything for the development of a model chapel program. In addition to chapels designed to serve the needs of personnel of all faiths, this religious center will include a complete religious education plant. Provision will be made also for the display of all kinds of chaplain equipment and supplies under working conditions.

Here, under the leadership of the Post Chaplain, the religious educational program of the post will be carried out under conditions which permit participation on the part of student chaplains. After

Flight Pay Issue Conference Subject

Senate and House conferees met this week to iron out differences in the military appropriations bill for fiscal year 1952, including the controversy over proficiency flight pay.

The Senate bill provides $59.5 billion for the Armed Forces, an increase of $3.4 billion over the amount of funds voted by the House. This is one of the points of dispute which must be settled by the conference committee and then gain Senate and House agreement.

In addition to the variance in the amount of funds voted for the Armed Forces by the House and Senate, these are among other issues considered by the conference committee:

1. Flight Pay—The House bill leaves flight pay policies unchanged; the Senate version curtails proficiency flight pay for the Air Force, Navy, and Marine Corps.

2. Retirement—The House blocks retirement of non-Regulars except for physical disability or statutory age; the Senate omits such a restrictive stipulation.

3. Reserve Release—The House calls for release of thousands of Reservists who complete one year's service subsequent to 26 June 1950; the Senate maintains the release target at 17 months.

4. Commissary Prices—The House wants prices hiked a minimum of 18 per cent at Army and Air Force commissaries and about 13 or 14 per cent at Navy and Marine Corps commissaries; the Senate leaves prices unchanged at Navy and Marine Corps facilities and raises prices by five or six per cent for the Army and Air Force commissaries.

Despite the fact that no testimony was received by the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on this subject during voluminous hearings, the Senate, by a vote of 49-31, carried an amendment by Senator Paul Douglas (D-Ill.) restricting flight pay to officers who fly 20 hours a month or who are assigned to combat units.

The amendment was passed over the vehement protests of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.), chairman of the Senate group which conducted extensive hearings on the 1952 defense budget.

It is not conceivable that Senators voting for the flight pay restriction were cognizant of the drastic effect the amendment could have on flight training for Reserve forces.

To fly 20 hours per month, Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve and Navy Reserve aviators would have to spend virtually every single week-end at training facilities. If this even were possible on a personal basis, the fact is that sufficient aircraft could not be provided for such training. Hence, the Reserve program of the Air Force and Naval aviation would be affected seriously by the hastily adopted Senate amendment.

Senator Douglas said his amendment whose nomination to be Deputy Secretary of Defense was reported to the Senate this week by the Committee on Armed Services.

President Signs AF Act

The President this week signed the Air Force Organization Act of 1951 following Congressional approval of the report of the Senate-House conference committee.

Principal change in the act is a proviso which grants to the Air Force Chief of Staff, under the direction of the Secretary of the Air Force, the authority to exercise command over the Air Defense Command, the Strategic Air Command, the Tactical Air Command, and such other major commands as may be established by the Secretary of the Air Force during a period of war or national emergency declared by the Congress or the President.

Another important provision of the new act provides that no more than 2,800 officers of the Air Force shall be assigned to permanent duty at Air Force Headquarters, and that their tours shall not exceed four years.

Originally, the House-passed measure had provided that the Air Force should have no separately constituted or administered arms, branches, services or corps. This was deleted in the Senate, and agreed to by the House in the conference committee. The Air Force may now designate members to perform specific duties, but the new bill does not prohibit the creation of a separately constituted or

Military Pay Raise Study Is Initiated

A pay raise for military personnel is now under consideration in top echelons at the Pentagon.

The Armed Forces have been called upon to supply statistical data—probably by next week—to show the relationship of military pay to the cost of living increase since passage of the Career Compensation Act in October 1949.

On the basis of remedial cost-of-living pay increases being given to the Government's civilian employees, a military pay boost of approximately 10 per cent is conceivable.

Late this week, it became known that Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg, who is in charge of manpower and all problems relating to personnel, has requested detailed supporting evidence on the military pay situation from the Army, Navy and Air Force.

A spokesman for Mrs. Rosenberg said she has requested speedy action and the likelihood is that the pay data will be in her hands before the end of the month.

The fact that such a request was made to the Services is a pointed indication that the Department of Defense now is considering seriously the introduction of legislation to obtain cost-of-living pay increases for military personnel.

It is apparent, in view of the pay hikes for civilian employees of the Government, that unless such action is taken, the military-civilian pay alignment worked out by the Hook Commission and substantially endorsed by Congress quickly would be upset.

Should the Department of Defense conclude, on the basis of the data which will be compiled by Mrs. Rosenberg, that military pay legislation is a "must," quick action will have to be taken. This is because of the fact that Congress is nearing adjournment. Indeed, there is the possibility that the Department already may have waited too long to initiate the pay study and that remedial pay legislation will have to wait until 1952.

Meantime, the Department has yet to make its views known on a bill introduced in May by Representative James Van Zandt (R-Pa.) which would tie military pay directly to the Cost of Living Index.

Congressman Van Zandt, an Armed Services Committee member, in introducing his bill (H.R. 3991) reported that its passage would mean an immediate nine per cent pay increase for men and women in uniform.

Calling for rapid action, Congressman Van Zandt, a captain in the Naval Reserve, noted that because of frequent transfers, separation of families, etc., the cost-of-living increase for military personnel actually has been higher than that experienced by civilians.

The bill was sent to the Department

San Francisco Chronicle—"Two important things should be remembered about this new weapon. . . we don't yet have it; it's going to be a long time before it can do even those jobs for which it is suited. In the second place, there are many, many jobs for which it is in no wise suited."

Cincinnati Post—"If we do not follow this course now, the chance of constructive, peacetime use of this potentially magnificent benefactor will pass from our hands as fast as the communists can steal it."

THE WAR IN KOREA

MUCH of the ground fighting in Korea this week occurred in the area northwest of Yanggu on the central front. In this region United Nations forces in limited objective attacks cleared the Reds from several high ridges, materially improving their position and acquiring observation points giving unobstructed view of enemy territory for distances of more than five miles.

Communist troops were well dug-in and put up strong resistance to Allied attacks. Advancing in a heavy rain United Nations Infantry, supported by tanks and artillery, blasted their way up the muddy slopes and secured the dominating terrain after heavy fighting. In later fighting the Reds recaptured one of the peaks they had previously lost to the Allies.

In central Korea, near Pyonggang, the apex of the old Iron Triangle, Allied tank units, supported by air, made a raid in force late this week to test the enemy's strength in this area. The attack gained some ground and inflicted heavy casualties.

Elsewhere on the front there were a number of local engagements, with limited gains by Allied forces. The Red positions were strongly held and resistance was almost uniformly heavy throughout the front. There were several enemy counter-attacks, but these were all defensive in character, or were light probing operations to secure information.

Large helicopters moved a company of fully-equipped Marines into front line positions in the rugged terrain of the east and central front this week. The operation was completed in four hours, whereas the movement on foot up the steep mountains would have taken two days. This is the first time in the history of warfare that a combat unit of this size has been moved into battle by helicopters.

Early in the week rains were heavy and general, greatly impeding air support for ground troops, and hampering air observation and interdiction strikes behind the lines. Subsequent clearing weather enabled greater air participation in ground actions, and also made possible heavy air attacks against enemy rail and highway traffic, as well as on Red supply and troop installations.

In four encounters with enemy aircraft our planes shot down one Red jet fighter and damaged eight others. During most of the time there was little air interception by the enemy, but our planes received extremely heavy and accurate anti-aircraft fire. One B-29 medium bomber was lost at sea.

The crash of a returning Navy plane caused an explosion and fire aboard the U. S. Heavy Carrier Essex off the east coast of Korea. The accident resulted in a number of casualties, but in only superficial damage to the carrier. The warship continued in action.

Air observers noted heavy enemy truck movements south of the 39th parallel, indicating a decreased use of rail lines in that area. Apparently damage inflicted by air attacks on rail lines has been so great that increased reliance is being placed on highway transport as movements of troops and supplies approach the front.

However, road traffic, even at night, is becoming increasingly hazardous. Night-flying Allied aircraft, aided by flare-dropping cargo planes, are locating enemy trucks, moving without lights on secondary roads, and are taking a heavy toll of vehicles. During this week several hundred Red trucks were reported destroyed or damaged.

There is considerable evidence of the arrival of fresh Chinese troops and rehabilitated North Korean units in the forward areas. These represent replacements, rather than reinforcements. Many enemy organizations which were seriously hurt in the past few months have been withdrawn, probably to Manchuria, and are being replaced at the front by new units.

While the presence of new troops in Korea increase the enemy capability of mounting a general offensive there is little evidence that such an operation is in immediate prospect. There was some concern last weekend that the Reds might take advantage of the full moon to begin a new drive with heavy night attacks. However, the weekend passed with no unusual development and little change in the military situation.

Disposition of enemy troops continues to be defensive in character. They are deeply entrenched, and have constructed log bunkers and other light field fortifications. In several areas the Reds have installed mine fields to protect their positions. The mines, both anti-personnel and anti-tank, are placed within wooden cases to counter the use of magnetic detectors. They are set to detonate at extremely light pressures.

Lt. Gen. Wm. M. Hoge, Commanding the IX Corps of the Eighth Army, expressed the opinion this week that morale of many of the Communist soldiers was beginning to break under the strain of hard fighting which had inflicted such heavy losses on the Reds. He said enemy troops on the IX Corps front were now surrendering in increasing numbers. The general paid tribute to the remarkable endurance and stamina of the enemy soldiers, but said that he doubted that they would be able to withstand the cold of another winter in the bleak North Korean mountains.

Ground action near the western end of the trans-peninsular battle line was light during the week. United Nations patrols reported light enemy contact in the Korangpo-ri and Yongchon sectors. An enemy battalion west of Chorwon stubbornly resisted Allied advances. Counter-attacks in this area were repulsed.

Several light probing attacks and minor patrol clashes were reported by United Nations forces northeast of Kumsong. Enemy counter-attacks south of Kumsong were repelled after several sharp skirmishes. Southeast of Kumsong small Allied and enemy units fought a prolonged engagement with insignificant results.

North and northwest of Yanggu, Allied forces overcame heavy enemy resistance to take important high ground. In one section of this front the Allies took 37 prisoners and counted 206 enemy dead on the summit of a hill. Other hills and ridge lines were taken as the enemy was driven to the north.

Limited gains were reported by attacking United Nations forces northeast of the Punch Bowl in eastern Korea where moderate opposition was encountered. Several Red counter-attacks were repulsed in this area, as mopping-up operations continued.

Near the east coast in the area west of Kamsong scattered enemy groups in bunkered positions successfully thwarted Allied efforts to rout them. Light to moderate resistance was reported along the rest of the eastern front.

Naval air and surface forces found lucrative enemy targets along the coasts and over North Korea during the week. Surface vessels bombarded Red shore positions, supply centers, and transportation facilities on the east and west coasts, while carrier-based planes ranged over enemy territory, bombing and strafing communications lines, supply dumps, and troop concentrations.

A combined attack from the sea and air was made on the enemy-held, battered east coast port of Wonsan. Warships shelled this Red supply center, while aircraft pounded it with bombs.

The attack on Wonsan was led by the U. S. Heavy Cruiser Toledo and the Destroyers Craig, Orleck and Parks, which rained anti-personnel, fragmentation shells on the town to suppress enemy flak. Fireflies and Sea Furies, flying from the British Light Cruiser Glory, followed with repeated air strikes on marshalling yards, rail junctions and supply dumps.

Following the air attack helicopters from the Toledo and planes from the Glory served as spotters, as the Toledo's heavy rifles scored repeated direct hits with 8-inch shells on a railroad roundhouse and several nearby warehouses.

The Destroyer Parks and the Destroyer Escort Moore later continued their interdiction fire on enemy targets south of Wonsan, concentrating on rail and highway junctions, gun emplacements, and beach areas.

To the north the Australian Destroyer Anzac and the U. S. Destroyer Escort Naifeh pounded enemy installations and transportation facilities along the east coast from Songjin to Chongjin. The Anzac hit a rail and road junction below Kyongsong, and a large secondary explosion resulted. The Naifeh closed the mouth of a tunnel near Chuuronjang, and also damaged rail intersections, bridges and marshalling yards.

On the west coast south of Haeju the British Light Cruiser Belfast pounded enemy defenses and troop concentrations. Concrete trenches under construction were demolished, and a battalion command post and assembly areas were hit.

North of the Han River in Western Korea the British Frigate Amethyst and the Australian Frigate Murchison attacked troop positions at Pungdong-ni with excellent results.

Navy planes from the heavy carriers of Task Force 77 off the east coast hit bridges, rolling stock, warehouses, rail lines and locomotives in North Korea. They also supplied effective tactical support for Allied front-line ground troops.

North of Kamsong on the east coast ground controllers credited Corsairs and Skyraiders from the U. S. Carrier Essex with 100 per cent coverage of enemy troops, which were hit by napalm and high explosives.

Night fighters of the First Marine Air Wing blasted truck routes, and attacked widely scattered rail points and gun and mortar positions. Many vehicular convoys were heavily damaged and much road traffic disrupted.

Three air-to-air battles over Northwest Korea on Wednesday and another on Thursday resulted in the destruction of one MIG-15 jet fighter and damage to eight others, with no Allied losses reported.

In Wednesday's fights more than 150 jet planes were engaged on both sides in a series of encounters in the area between the towns of Anju and Sinuiju, near the Manchurian border. American F-84 Thunder Jets and F-86 Sabre Jets engaged strong formations of enemy MIG's and in separate battles the Thunder Jets shot down one Red plane and damaged another, while the Sabre Jets damaged four.

On the following day another encounter occurred in which American Sabre Jets damaged three enemy planes. No damage to American aircraft was reported in any of these fights.

An American B-29 medium bomber, with a crew of 14, was lost at sea off Korea, apparently from causes other than enemy action. A night distress call was received from the plane, and searching aircraft later sighted a wing and other wreckage in the sea, but no survivors or life rafts were located.

Bombing attacks were made this week on bridges and airfields in North Korea by American Superforts of the Eighth Bomber Command. The medium bombers hit the key railroad bypass bridge across the Chongchong River at Sinanju. Fifty tons of 1,000-lb. bombs were aimed at the temporary bridge, which is 2,000 feet long and only 7½ feet wide.

Previously the main steel and concrete railroad bridge at this point had been knocked out by Allied air attacks, and the new long, narrow wooden structure, nearing completion, was intended as its replacement. The extent of the damage inflicted by this week's air attack was not immediately determined. Moderate flak, but no enemy air opposition was encountered.

Other B-29s utilized radar to crater the runways and blast the buildings at Sondok airfield, southwest of Hamhung on the east coast of Korea. No flak or air opposition was experienced.

American flying boxcars of the 315th Air Division (Combat Cargo) penetrated the mountainous terrain of East Central Korea to drop 25 tons of urgently needed ammunition to forward elements of United Nations ground troops heavily engaged in attacks on deeply entrenched enemy forces. When the C-119 cargo planes arrived in the drop zone they encountered heavy and accurate enemy anti-aircraft fire. However, an Allied Mosquito training plane led the transports down narrow valleys to avoid the enemy flak.

Survivor Benefits

The subcommittee of the House Committee on Armed Services resumed hearings this week on the survivor benefits bill, with Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, appearing before the group and giving strong endorsement to the measure.

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), chairman of the subcommittee, is continuing an attempt to correlate the maze of laws and inequities now in effect, before attempting to superimpose the newly proposed pay-as-you-go rates recommended by the Defense Department.

The Committee heard two Government experts on insurance calculation risks. Both testified that the system proposed would be solvent and self-sustaining in time of peace, but "difficult under war conditions."

Representatives of the Retired Officers Association, the Gold Star Wives of America, and the Fleet Reserve, also added their support to the measure.

Admiral Fechteler said in his statement to the committee:

"During the last Congress I testified before this committee on H. R. 8035, a bill designed to accomplish the same objectives as the bill now under consideration. At the time I stated that I did not, as Commander in Chief, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, feel that I should recommend enactment of legislation of this nature until I had determined whether or not its provisions were actually desired by the officers and men in general. In this connection I further stated:

"In order to satisfy myself on this point I had a survey conducted among the officers and men of the Fleet. In conducting this survey an officer on my staff went aboard a cruiser, four destroyers, and an auxiliary ship. These vessels were chosen at random. When aboard each vessel this officer talked to groups of officers and men assembled from the off-duty sections. In this way an absolute cross section of the ship's complement was interviewed. The provisions of the Bill (H. R. 8035) were explained to each group, and all questions from the group answered in so far as possible. The groups were then dismissed. A few days later they were reassembled by the ship's officers and asked to indicate whether they favored enactment of the measure or opposed it. No attempt was made to exert any influence or pressure on any one. It was clearly explained that the information wanted was the individual opinion of each person in connection with the proposed legislation.

"The results of this survey are as follows: 'Total number interviewed—1,611* For—72%. Against—28%.

"*Of the above total 73 were officers.

"An analysis of those who opposed the measure was made and it was found that approximately 83% of those opposed were single and under 21 years of age. I do not attach much significance to the opinions of these young men because they were asked to evaluate a measure for which neither their experience nor responsibilities provided a sufficient qualification. Therefore, I conclude that the overwhelming majority of the personnel of the Atlantic Fleet in whose judgment we can rely are in favor of the enactment of this Bill into law."

"Since the date of my previous testimony I have personally talked to many officers and men on the subject of legislation of this nature and I have found them uniformly of the opinion that it is much needed and much desired.

"In seeking to uncover those measures which contribute to high morale I have observed that one of the most important is, 'Sense of Security.' By this I mean the satisfaction and sense of well being which exists within a man when he knows that adequate provision has been made for his dependent loved ones, regardless of what misfortune may come to him personally.

"Having undergone the experience, I am in position to say that the demands of military service, with frequent changes of station, absence from home, and remoteness from civil pursuits render it virtually impossible for one to accumulate out of his pay sufficient means with which to provide a minimum of security for those dependent upon him. In the light of advancing costs of living this problem becomes increasingly acute.

"I feel, therefore, that legislation providing for survivor's benefits is an appropriate supplement to the Career Compensation Act of 1949. I believe it will contribute immeasurably to the feeling of well being among the officers and men of the service. The fact that they indicate a willingness to contribute sufficiently from their pay to make the measure self-supporting is a convincing indication of the need for such a plan. By previous Acts, the Congress has recognized the need for this type of security in the case of civilian employees of the government, and has passed legislation incorporating provisions similar to those contained in the Department of Defense proposal into retirement systems of the Civil Service and the Foreign Service."

New Dept. Heads Have Service Backgrounds

ROBERT A. LOVETT

THE new Secretary of Defense, Robert A. Lovett, although he was born a Texan and still wears the look of a Westerner on his tall, rangy frame, has lived the greater part of his 56 years in the East.

Educated at Yale University, where he studied law (perhaps out of deference to his father who was a judge) and business administration, Secretary Lovett lived on Long Island and was a partner in the New York investment banking firm of Brown Brothers Harriman and Company before he accepted his first appointment to Government service in 1940.

While a young student at Yale, he joined an Aerial Coast Patrol Unit and learned to fly at Port Washington, L. I. The unit was the first such group organized and when World War I broke out it was absorbed by the Navy.

Lovett, then not quite 22 years old, sailed for France as a Naval flying pilot. There he won his French wings and established a Naval flying school. With the school operating smoothly, he was shifted across the channel to England and put to work with the Royal Naval Air Service piloting flying boats on North sea patrols.

Early in 1918, he moved back into France with the RNAS and for a while flew bombers across enemy lines to strike German submarine bases. During this period he became a strong advocate of bombing, and when the U. S. Navy set up a bombing group, young Lovett was given command of Naval Air Squadron One. In this command for "active and daring raids" against German sub bases, he was awarded the Navy Cross.

The following year, after he had been promoted to lieutenant commander, he returned to the United States and entered the Harvard Law School to take post graduate work. From 1920-21 he studied at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, after which he began his business career as a clerk in the National Bank of Commerce.

In the ensuing 19 years, he became a partner in the Brown Brothers firm, was made a director and member of the executive committee of Union Pacific Railroad, two other rail companies and a navigation company. He became a trustee of a fourth railroad and a member of the executive committee of the New York Trust Company. He held directorships in five additional organizations, and top positions in numerous others.

Throughout his career, the new Defense Secretary's personal interest in aviation has always been in the foreground. He was one of a group of aviation enthusiasts who financed an experimental plane in hopes of winning back the Schneider Cup from Great Britain (a prize given in a competition designed to aid sea plane development).

On trips abroad, which he made annually, Mr. Lovett kept abreast of developments in European commercial and military aviation, and, in 1940, he was selected by the then Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson as a special assistant. Four months after he gave up his business connections and came to Washington, he was named Assistant Secretary of War for Air. In this assignment, he continued his advocacy of striking power in the air and talked aircraft manufacturers into pooling their plants and experience to produce long range bombers.

No desk commando, Mr. Lovett took time out to learn first hand what U. S. pilots were contributing to the war effort. He made flights to the United Kingdom and North Africa to inspect air operations. During this period he worked closely with General George C. Marshall, then Chief of Staff of the Army. In December 1945, when the war had come to an end, Mr. Lovett resigned and returned to work with his investment firm.

A scant year and a half later, when General Marshall was appointed Secretary of State, Mr. Lovett again packed to travel to Washington. General Marshall had asked him to come into the State Department as his deputy, the Under Secretary of State. The two men now worked as a team. Both resigned at about the same time—General Mar-

WILLIAM C. FOSTER

WILLIAM Chapman Foster, who has been named by President Truman to be Deputy Secretary of Defense, is a big square-shouldered man with a firm, calm face.

Like his new boss in the Defense Department, he is also an aviation enthusiast, and served as a pilot during World War I. Born in Westfield, N. J. in April 1897, he attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but left in his senior year to join the Army Air Corps. In 1918 he was commissioned a flying second lieutenant.

Mr. Foster's career in many ways parallels that of Secretary Lovett. After the first world war ended, he became affiliated with the Pressed and Welded Steel Products Company, Inc., of Long Island, N. Y., and in the following 24 years rose to the presidency of the firm. He also served as officer and director of other manufacturing companies, became president of his golf club near his home in Hartford, Conn., was made chairman of the community service council, trustee and vice president of other organizations, and president of the Point O'Woods Association, at the summer colony of Point O'Woods, N. Y., and of the Great South Bay Yacht Racing Association.

During World War II, he was called to Washington to become a member and chairman of the Purchase Policy Advisory Committee of the War Department, and served in numerous other positions with the Army Service Forces and as a special representative of the Under Secretary of War on procurement for the Army Air Forces.

Later, he became Under Secretary of Commerce, and with the inception of the Marshall Plan in 1948, was appointed Deputy U. S. Special Representative in Europe with the rank of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary.

Foster has the reputation of being a trouble-shooter, but not the sort who rules with an iron fist. Subordinates who take their worries to him often find that he already has a surprising knowledge of the persons and issues involved.

In Paris, during his early work with the infant ECA, he called in his division heads twice a month to hear about their work. As each official spoke, Foster perused a small place-card in front of him which bore all of the salient facts about the man, his job, his problems and opportunities. The early morning meetings, held "between breakfast and work," are a habit with the newly nominated Deputy Secretary of Defense and perhaps an innovation which he will bring with him into the Pentagon.

In June 1949, Foster was called back to Washington as Deputy Administrator of ECA, and slightly less than a year ago was named Administrator of the gigantic global aid program.

A golfer and yachtsman, he spends as much time as possible out of doors and his face is always tanned. He has had his own boat, either sail or power, since he was seven, and nowadays climbs aboard his present boat whenever he can manage for a cruise on inland waterways. He handles the wheel and takes care of the charts, and even fixes the engine when anything goes wrong. He says that he knows of few things in life that provide needed self-confidence like the responsibility of getting a boat out and back safely.

His work with the ECA has convinced him that the destiny of the people of Europe and Asia is closely tied up with that of America and the rest of the free world.

The Senate Committee on Armed Services on 20 Sept. voted to report Mr. Foster's nomination to the Senate for confirmation. The vote was not unanimous. During the Committee's interrogation of Mr. Foster, Senator Cain (R-Wash.) recalled a statement attributed to Mr. Foster prior to the Korean outbreak that there was no trouble brewing there and that if any should start the South Koreans could handle it. "I have not made up my mind," said Senator Cain, "how I shall vote on your confirmation, but I want to make it clear that I believe that in the past this nation has been deficient in intelligence and we must be more careful."

Study Withholding Pay

A team of Army Finance Corps experts will gain the views of fighting men in Korea regarding suggestions that a large portion of the pay received by men in combat be withheld.

During recent months there has been considerable discussion on the subject of how much money men in front line areas want on payday. It is the contention of some that cash is a "nuisance" in combat and that most of a combat man's pay should be withheld.

A three-man team from the Office of the Chief of Finance left 22 Sept. for the Far East, it is announced by Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Chief of Finance, to study this and other pay problems.

Brig. Gen. William P. Campbell, USA, assistant chief of Finance, heads the team. Other members are Col. A. W. Widmer, chief of the Receipts and Disbursements Division, and Maj. H. W. Kasserman, Management Improvement Branch chief.

The team will be gone six weeks, spending a month in Korea and the rest of the time in Japan and en route.

Its members will discuss finance problems with commanders at various echelon headquarters, with disbursing officers and with hospital officials.

"The group also intends to reach a considerable number of enlisted men in front line areas to ascertain their personal feelings regarding the finance service they receive and their desires regarding the amount of money which should be paid to them," General Sawyer said.

"In Japan, the team will discuss the same matters with a number of casualties," he added.

Regarding casualties, the Finance Corps' main interest is whether individual pay records are being sent back from Korea to Japan speedily and efficiently enough to assure a minimum of delay in paying hospitalized Army members.

Would Ban Retirements

While Senate and House conferees will decide whether or not to include in the 1952 defense appropriations bill a ban on retirements of Regulars except for physical disability or statutory age, Representative Walter Norblad (R-Oregon) this week introduced a bill to prevent career officers from retirement prior to the age of 62 "except for physical disability or mental or moral factors."

Congressman Norblad dispatched a letter to Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter asking for information regarding the recent resignation of "a 38-year-old Air Force General who was in charge of procurement."

The Congressman said he was referring to Brig. Gen. Horace A. Shepard. Representative Norblad said General Shepard had accepted a position with the Thompson Products Company of Cleveland. General Shepard had served 17 years prior to his resignation.

Following is the text of Congressman Norblad's letter to Secretary Finletter:

"As you may know, I have today introduced legislation providing that retirement of career officers, except for physical disability or mental or moral factors, shall not take place until they attain the age of 62.

"I have done this in view of the fact that there have been so many high-ranking officers from 47 to 53 who have been resigning in this period of national emergency. I have now observed that a 38-year old Air Force General who was in charge of procurement has resigned with your approval and obtained employment with a manufacturing company in Cleveland, which manufactures the parts of jet engines used by our Air Force.

"With men from all walks of life being constantly called back into the service every day in the week, I am at a loss to understand how a resignation of this kind at this crucial time could have been permitted.

"I would appreciate your advising me the facts in the case."

The amendment to the appropriations bill, as passed by the House but not approved by the Senate and hence a topic for conference committee action, is applicable to Regular enlisted men as well as officers. Since there is no statutory retirement age for enlisted men, it is conceivable that the Services could have enlisted men in their 70's who could not be retired.

MPC 10th Anniversary

The Army's Military Police Corps, created to fill an emergency need and since established as a permanent branch of the Army, will observe the tenth anniversary of its founding on 26 Sept.

The Military Police Corps was made a separate service on 26 Sept. 1941, when the nation was building up its armed strength under the threat of aggression. Composed of selected officers and men trained for their specialized duties, the Corps proved its value in World War II, and in June 1950, through Congressional action, it was given permanent status as one of the Army's basic branches.

Up until 10 years ago, soldiers of the various arms and services were detailed temporarily for military police duty, frequently without regard for their qualifications and without instruction in police work. The members of the Military Police Corps of 1951 bear little resemblance to their pre-World War II predecessors, as pointed out by Maj. Gen. E. P. Parker, The Provost Marshal General of the Army.

"Today's military policeman is selected for his assignment on the basis of high mental and moral, as well as physical, qualifications," said General Parker, chief of the Corps. "He is given intensive and continuing training in all phases of law enforcement. He knows the importance of his mission, in the combat zone, in occupied areas, and here at home, and he looks upon military police duty as his career."

"Helpfulness and service are the keynote of modern Military Police Corps doctrine, and only those who can measure up to the Corps' high standards are permitted to serve within its ranks."

The functions of the Military Police Corps are many and varied, but they all add up to its primary mission, the maintenance of order. On its tenth anniversary, members of the Corps are engaged in prevention and investigation of crime, control of military traffic, apprehension of deserters, processing and guarding of prisoners of war, straggler control, screening and evacuation of refugees, anti-guerrilla activities, security of command posts and supply lines, and related duties both overseas and in the continental United States.

The military police have won high praise in official reports and press dispatches from Korea. In his anniversary message, General Parker said:

"We can take pride in the manner in which members of the Military Police

Maj. Gen. Parker

Corps have performed their duties under combat conditions in Korea. They have accomplished a magnificent combat-support mission as military policeman and as combat soldiers. The many citations and decorations which have been won by Military Police Corps units and individuals in Korea, and the fine comments I have heard from the field commanders, attest to duty well performed."

General Parker has invited Department of the Army general staff chiefs, heads of the other administrative and technical services, and other high-ranking officials to join his staff in observance of the anniversary on Wednesday afternoon in The Provost Marshal General's Office, Main Navy Building, Washington.

Where military duties permit, other ceremonies marking the occasion will be held at posts, camps, and stations throughout the country and overseas. A special tenth anniversary program will be presented at The Provost Marshal General Center, Camp Gordon, Ga., where the Army trains police personnel for all the Armed Forces.

Finance Ruling Explained

If an Army enlisted man with dependents is demoted but neglects to tell his personnel officer that he'd like to cut down the amount he contributes each month towards his Class "Q" Allotment, he can't come around two or three months later and make the allotment reduction retroactive.

A change in Special Regulations 35-1465-15 puts this ruling into effect. The change has been sent to the Adjutant General and will be published shortly, Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Army Chief of Finance, announced this week.

Create New Eng. District

Establishment of a new engineer district to be known as the Atlantic District, is announced by Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Army Engineers. Col. Charles T. Tench, formerly Fifth Army Engineer at Chicago, Ill., will be the district engineer. Temporary headquarters have been established at 80 Lafayette St., New York City.

The new district, under the jurisdiction of the North Atlantic Division, will handle off-continent military construction projects in the Atlantic, from Bermuda north, except projects otherwise assigned.

New Army Chevrons

Army Quartermaster officials report that the new type chevrons for enlisted men—they are the same as those used at the end of World War II—will be available for issue about the end of October. The Army is replacing the small size chevrons adopted following the war.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Army's New QMG

Maj. Gen. George A. Horkan, USA, who will succeed Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, USA, as Quartermaster General on 30 Sept. upon the latter's retirement, was Chief Quartermaster of the European Command until ordered to Washington, D. C., in August.

At 57 years of age, General Horkan looks back on a distinguished record of military service which began with service as a battalion sergeant major in the 1st Infantry of the Georgia National Guard from July to October 1916.

He was made a second lieutenant in the Infantry Reserve in August 1917 and commissioned a second lieutenant in the Regular Army in October of that year.

During World War II, General Horkan served as Commandant of the Quartermaster School at Camp Lee, Va., and later as commanding general of that post.

In February 1946 General Horkan was appointed director of the Memorial Division in the Office of the Quartermaster General and gained acclaim for the manner in which the return of war dead to the U. S. was accomplished. He became Chief Quartermaster of EUCOM in Aug. 1948.

Foreign Aid Deputy

Brig. Gen. George C. Stewart, USA, has been assigned as Deputy Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, for Foreign Military Aid. He succeeds Brig. Gen. George H. Olmsted, USA, who was appointed Director of the Office of Military Assistance, Department of Defense, on 27 Aug.

General Stewart recently returned from Korea where he was Assistant Division Commander of the Army's 2d Infantry Division.

Society of 3d Inf. Div.

The Society of the Third Infantry Division is endeavoring to contact all former members of the Division who are not now members of the Society. Those interested should write to the National Secretary, Society of the Third Infantry Division, Mr. Harry Cedar, P. O. Box 74, Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington 4, D. C.

Commands Remount Depot

Col. Ralph E. Ireland has recently returned from the Far East Command and is being assigned as Officer-in-Charge of the Reno QM Remount Station, at El Reno, Okla.

Col. Russell K. Kuhns, another recent returnee from the Far East, was assigned 17 Sept. to the Jeffersonville Quartermaster Depot, Ind., as Chief, QM Research and Development Laboratories.

Open Engineer OCS

An Engineer Officers Candidate School will open at Ft. Belvoir, Va., 24 Sept. when 60 candidates begin a 22-week course. The Ft. Belvoir OCS, under the command of Col. Philip Y. Browning, will turn out second lieutenants in the Corps of Engineers.

Three other Officers Candidate Schools are now in operation in the country. They are the Infantry OCS at Ft. Benning, Ga., the Artillery OCS at Ft. Sill, Okla., and the Branch Immaterial OCS at Ft. Riley, Kans. Two others, the Armored School and the Signal School, are being set up now at Ft. Knox, Ky., and Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

For the rest of the year after the 24 Sept. opening, new classes will start at Ft. Belvoir every two weeks. By 1 Jan., about 400 men are expected to be in officer training.

The first 60 candidates, representing all six Army areas, will arrive Thursday, September 20 for processing.

Before assuming command of the OCS, Colonel Browning was chief of the administrative service department at the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories at Ft. Belvoir. He is a West Point graduate, Class of 1938.

"Fractional" Bond Purchases

A plan by which soldiers may have as little as $6.25 deducted from their pay each month to buy U. S. Savings Bonds was announced this week by Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Army Chief of Finance.

Previously, the smallest possible monthly deduction was $18.75, the price of one $25 bond. The new plan takes effect 1 Oct.

Special Regulations in the 35-810 series have been changed to provide for the new, lower allotments for bonds.

"I'd like to point out that many Army members recently have arranged to have the monthly premiums on their National Service Life Insurance policies waived, under the provisions of the 'Free G.I. Insurance' law," General Sawyer said.

"The $6.25 bond deduction now permissible is very close to the same amount they previously had set aside for their insurance."

"Thus, the result to the serviceman who secures an insurance premium waiver and takes advantage of the $6.25 bond deduction plan is that he has the double benefit of insurance plus a growing 'stockpile' of bonds without actually cutting into the amount he receives on payday."

Gen. Williams Appointed

Brig. Gen. Robert P. Williams, USA (Ret.), was named this week by Governor McKeldin of Maryland to head the state's division of medical services of the Civil Defense Agency.

General Williams, now in Europe on a special mission for the Army Surgeon General, was retired last month after 36 years' service. He had been chief of the medical section in the office of the Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va.

General Williams will take over his new post on 1 Dec.

The Chaplains' School

sharing in the activities of the religious center, the chaplain student should return to his duty station with ideas and experience which will make him a more effective member of the staff.

The requirements for the commissioning of a chaplain are high. Our students come to us with four years of college and a minimum of three years of seminary training behind them. In addition, most of them have had two or more years' practical experience as clergymen. It is our purpose to show them how they can adapt the professional skills they already possess to a military ministry.

This begins with a complete indoctrination in military subjects. We teach staff procedure to show the chaplain just where he will fit into the operation of the military organization. Organization and administration of the service at large become familiar subjects to the student. He studies map reading, customs and courtesies of the service, the rules of land warfare, concepts of power and the specific duties of the unit chaplain.

Certain aspects of the chaplain's military ministry are a natural continuation of duties he performed as a civilian clergyman. We help him bridge the gap between the one and the other by offering courses in Speech Techniques to brief him on some of the peculiar techniques of addressing a military audience as compared with a civilian one; counseling, to prepare him for dealing with the problems of military personnel; audio-visuals, to make his religious educational program and his contribution in the Character Guidance Lecture more effective.

The Chaplain School is a joint service school with a dual training program for Army and Air Force personnel. Each service is represented on the teaching staff by a director of training. While about 60 per cent of the subject matter is common to both training programs, the remaining 40 per cent demands specialized treatment.

Army and Air Force Chaplains train side by side. Chaplains of all faiths work and play together. We feel that this is at least as important as the actual academic training they receive. By working together, praying together, eating together, living together, sharing the same classrooms, the same drill periods, they learn to think of themselves as members of a team. They learn to think of themselves first of all as chaplains, regardless of credal differences, yet without sacrificing any of their denominational convictions. We like to think of The Chaplain School as the center from which emanates through our graduates a true esprit de corps. We like to think of The Chaplain School as the reservoir of spiritual and moral values for the Army and for the Air Force.

In addition to our program of resident training for chaplains, we have almost 1,000 officers of all components enrolled in extension courses. Also, at designated times during the year, we offer resident courses for chaplains' assistants and welfare specialists of the Army and Air Force. Through the continuance of this enlisted training, begun last year, we hope to increase throughout both services the effectiveness of the chaplains' office.

We of The Chaplain School are, I think, justifiably proud of the job we are doing and of the job our graduates are doing in the field. Now, with our greatly expanded facilities at Ft. Slocum, we aim to carry on with what is after all our primary mission—that of the chaplain service itself—bringing God to men and men to God.

Secretary Lovett

shall to retire to his Leesburg estate and Mr. Lovett to return to his New York offices.

When General Marshall was prevailed upon to come out of retirement and take the difficult job of Defense Secretary, he again called on his patriotic friend, Mr. Lovett, who took over the number two spot in the military establishment.

With General Marshall's resignation last week, it was no surprise to learn that he had recommended Robert A. Lovett to be his successor. The new Secretary has earned many friends in the Nation's Capital during his years of Government service, and his confirmation was immediate. Under a suspension of the rules, the Senate unanimously approved his appointment less than 24 hours after he had been named by President Truman.

A hard worker, the new Defense Secretary arrives at his office in the Pentagon at 8:15 in the morning and leaves late in the afternoon—usually about six. He also comes in on Saturdays and works until mid-afternoon. On Sundays and holidays he appears for as long as is necessary to take care of any work that comes up. Mr. Lovett works rapidly and without tension. He is friendly and easy to talk with, and is well liked by his aides and associates as well as Congressional committee members with whom he comes in frequent contact on Capitol Hill.

In his spare time, Mr. Lovett, a movie addict, sees as many celluloid creations as possible. His interests are widely varied, but movies, any kind of movies, are his special method of relaxation.

New Navy Bureau Chiefs

Rear Adm. Murrey L. Royar, SC, was nominated this week to be Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts and Paymaster General of the Navy, succeeding Rear Adm. Charles W. Fox.

Admiral Fox, who had served in the post since October 1949, expected to be named by President Truman to be Chief of the Office of Naval Material, a three-star assignment now held by Vice Adm. Albert G. Noble, who will retire next month. Admiral Fox was nominated to have the grade, rank, pay and allowances of a Vice Admiral while serving under the Presidential Designation.

Admiral Royar, who has been in command of the Naval Supply Center at Oakland, Calif., will be relieved by Rear Adm. Thomas E. Hipp, Commanding Officer of the Naval Supply Center, Norfolk, Va.

Born in Los Angeles on 22 Nov. 1894, Admiral Royar was graduated from the University of California with the Class of 1918. He first joined the Navy as an Ensign in the Supply Corps on 29 June 1917, and served aboard the USS Columbia on convoy duty between New York and Europe during World War I. He subsequently advanced in rank until his promotion to Rear Admiral to date from 18 June 1943. For Supply Corps work during World War II he was awarded the Legion of Merit.

Admiral Fox was born in Baltimore, Md., on 5 Dec. 1894, and enlisted in the Navy at the age of 19. He was commissioned an Ensign in the Supply Corps six years later after participating in the Mexican Campaign in 1914 and serving in Ireland during World War I. He was advanced to the rank of Rear Admiral in 1943. During World War II, he served aboard the carrier Enterprise, and as Supply Officer in Command of the Naval Supply Depot, Mechanicsburg, Pa., where he earned the Legion of Merit. He became Deputy Chief and Assistant Chief of BuSAND in 1948, and Chief of the Bureau the following year.

Admiral Noble, who will be 56 in December, has completed almost 35 years' of Naval service. Born in Preston, Tex., on 14 Dec. 1895, he was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy with credit and commissioned Ensign on 29 March 1917. His World War I assignments included battleship service with the British Grand Fleet.

Just prior to World War II, he commanded the Destroyer Cassin, and served as Gunnery Officer on the staff of Commander, Battle Force, USS California flagship, and on the Staff of the Commander in Chief, U. S. Fleet. At the start of the second World War, Admiral Noble was on duty in the Bureau of Ordnance, and in March 1942, was assigned additional duty as Navy Department representative on the War Department Munitions Assignment Committee.

From March 1943 until March 1944, he commanded the light carrier Phoenix, participating in offensive bombardments against numerous Pacific Islands. Later, he served as Chief of Staff and Aide to the Commander, Seventh Amphibious Force, Pacific Fleet, and commanded an amphibious group. For his services in command of a naval force in operations in the Wake Island area, he was awarded the Navy Cross and the Legion of Merit. Subsequent assignments included duty in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations; command of Amphibious Group 8, command of Amphibious Group One; Assistant Chief of Naval Operations (Material); and Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance.

He was advanced to the rank of Vice Admiral with his appointment as Chief of Naval Material on 29 Dec. 1950. In addition to the Navy Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal, he also holds the Army DSM, and the Legion of Merit with two Gold Stars.

Navy Changes Board Dates

The dates for six Navy staff corps selection boards, previously scheduled for November, have been moved up to 30 Oct., the Navy announced this week.

They include Medical Corps, Supply Corps, Chaplain Corps, and Civil Engineer Corps boards which will select officers for promotion to the ranks of captain and commander, and Medical Service Corps and Nurse Corps boards which will select officers for promotion to commander only.

A seventh board, to select Dental Corps officers for promotion to captain and commander, has been postponed until 13 Nov. It was previously scheduled to meet on 6 Nov.

Another Dental Corps board, to recommend officers for temporary promotion to the grade of rear admiral, was moved back to 30 Oct. It had been scheduled to meet on 11 Sept.

Data on promotion zones and eligibility requirements was contained in the 8 Sept. issue of THE JOURNAL.

SRNC Fiscal Officer

Comdr. Joseph W. Rodes, USNR, has reported to Annapolis, Md., for duty as Comptroller of the U. S. Naval Academy and Severn River Naval Command.

"A Proper Marine Force"

Adm. William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, this week went on record in support of three Marine divisions and three air wings. Like his predecessor, the late Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, however, he objects to the addition of the Marine Commandant as a working member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In his first press conference since he took over the top Navy job, Admiral Fechteler stated that he believes "a three Marine division, three Marine air wing would be a proper Marine force." He said such expansion "would bring the total strength up to about 240,000."

The bill already passed by the Senate and reported out by the House Committee would make the maintenance of four divisions and supporting aircraft mandatory. The House bill would also make the Marine Commandant a permanent member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The House Rules Committee scheduled a hearing yesterday, 21 Sept., on a resolution to give the Marine Corps bill a specific time for consideration by the House.

When asked if he was plugging for a three-division, three-air-wing Marine Corps, the CNO replied that he was. The location of the additional division—the Marines now have two—would depend upon "the world strategic situation," he said. Admiral Fechteler added that it might not be "all assembled together as a division."

Discussing the proposal to add the Marine Commandant to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, he said he is "very much inclined to agree" with a statement made by Admiral Sherman that it isn't "necessary or wise to enlarge the Joint Chiefs."

Meanwhile, reports were being aired on the West Coast that a third Marine division would be set up at Camp Pendleton, Calif., where Brig. Gen. "Chesty" Puller recently established the new Third Marine Brigade. The Senate, in passing the huge military appropriations bill, has approved a $24,884,700 expansion program at Pendleton. This amount is almost five times the authorization previously allowed by the House of Representatives.

Marine is Aide to CNO

Maj. Sherman A. Smith, USMC, who reported for duty in Washington last July as aide to the late Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, has been newly appointed as aide to Admiral William M. Fechteler, who succeeded Admiral Sherman as Chief of Naval Operations.

Major Smith, who will also serve the CNO as assistant for aviation and Marine Corps matters, is a 1936 graduate of the University of Utah. He was formerly operations officer of VMR-352 at El Toro, Calif.

Marine Appropriation

The President this week sent to the House of Representatives a proposed supplemental appropriation of $20,781,850, "for additional troop housing and training facilities for the Marine Corps."

British Marine to Visit

The Commandant General of the British Royal Marines, General Sir Leslie C. Hollis, will arrive in New York City aboard the SS. Mauretania on 24 Sept. to be the guest of the U. S. Marine Corps.

After visiting General Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps, in Washington, General Hollis will make a tour of Marine Corps installations on the east and west coasts. His tentative itinerary is: 24 Sept. arrive in New York and proceed to Washington; 27-28 Sept., Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.; 29 Sept., Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C.; 30 Sept.-1 Oct., Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune, N. C.; 2 Oct., Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C.; 3 Oct., Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.; 4-5 Oct., Marine Barracks, Camp Joseph H. Pendleton, Oceanside, Calif.; 6 Oct., Marine Corps Air Station, El Toro, Calif.; 12 Oct., depart New York City aboard SS. Parthia.

Women Marines to Pearl

Two lady leathernecks from the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, N. C., have been assigned duty beginning early in October at Pearl Harbor. Sgt. Julia M. Pierce and Cpl. Mary E. Scudder will be among the first Women Marines to go to the Pacific since World War II.

Navy Retirements

The Navy has announced the retirements of 63 officers, including three who were retired in flag rank after completing more than 30 years service.

The flag officers are Rear Adm. Calvin T. Durgin, whose advancement to Vice Admiral is pending action by the Senate; Rear Adm. Charles A. Nicholson, II; and Rear Adm. William R. Cooke, Jr., who was retired in that rank by reason of combat citation.

One officer, Chief Gunner John Larsen, was retired in the rank of lieutenant commander after completing more than 40 years service.

of Defense for comment. Months went by but the Pentagon remained silent.

Now, however, it appears that the Department's long silence on a pay boost for military personnel is to be broken, and it now can be hoped that the facts regarding financial hardships suffered by men in Service will be made known.

The Department, following receipt of the pay data from the Services, will either endorse or oppose Mr. Van Zandt's bill, introduce a bill of its own, or else decide not to urge a pay increase.

Probably, the second alternative—the introduction of a Department pay bill—is the most likely at this time, although nothing official on this matter has yet been made known.

What is clear, however, is that, however belatedly, the Department now has set the wheels in motion for a possible military pay raise.

Just as the Post Office Department and the Civil Service Commission, armed with facts, conducted a successful Capitol Hill campaign for civilian pay increases; so the Department of Defense now will be able, if it chooses, to urge Congress not to discriminate against military personnel.

The Truce of the Bear

When he stands up like a tired man, tottering near and near;

When he stands up as pleading, in wavering, man-brute guise,

When he veils the hate and cunning of his little swinish eyes;

When he shows as seeking quarter, with paws like hands in prayer,

That is the time of peril—the time of the Truce of the Bear!

U. S. AIR FORCE

ATRC NURSES CONFER

Chief nurses from hospitals at Air Training Command bases met last week at ATRC Headquarters, Scott AFB, Ill., in what is reported to be the first command nurses' conference since founding of a separate Air Force Nurse Corps.

Lt. Col. Bertha Elsner, chief nurse of the Air Training Command, led the discussions. Another participant at the sessions was Col. O. F. McInay, Air Surgeon of the Air Training Command.

The conference was called to clarify new responsibilities given to many Air Force nurses as a result of the rapid expansion during recent months.

ARDC Chaplain Meet

Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Air Force chaplains, spoke at a conference of Air Research and Development Command chaplains 18 and 19 Sept. at the Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore, Md.

Accompanying Chaplain Carpenter from Washington was Chaplain (Col.) Charles W. Marteney. Chaplain (Maj.) Wendell Rex, Air Materiel Command chaplain in charge of supplies at Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio, also attended.

Six chaplains from ARDC research, test, and development centers located throughout the country attended also, according to Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ralph R. Radtke, ARDC headquarters chaplain.

They were Chaplains Elbert L. Atkinson (Lt. Col.) from Rome, N. Y., Air Development Center; John R. Stephen and William E. Pearson, (Majors) from the Air Force Missile Test Center at Patrick AFB, Cocoa, Fla.; Jerome R. Merwick and John A. Burgess, (Majors) from the Air Force Flight Test Center at Edwards AFB, Calif.; and Conrad C. Baldwin, (Capt.) from Holloman AFB, Alamogordo, N. Mex.

Aviation Cadet Ruling

Only Regular airmen of the Air Force are eligible for appointments as Aviation Cadets, according to a recent ruling of the Judge Advocate General.

Under present conditions, civilian applicants selected for cadets must enlist for four years prior to appointment as cadets. And now, under the Judge Advocate General ruling, reserve airmen and Air National Guard airmen, must be discharged from their respective component and enlist in the Regular Air Force.

Upon graduation former Reserve airmen and some Air National Guard airmen will be commissioned Second Lieutenants in the USAFR. Those under the Guard's special quotas will be commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Guard.

In event of elimination from training, the eliminees, with the exception of those selected under the separate Air National Guard quota, will be required to serve the unexpired portion of their four-year enlistments.

Those eliminees selected under the separate Air National Guard quota will be given a choice of returning to the Guard or remaining in the Regular Air Force.

Commands Carswell AFB

Maj. Gen. C. S. Irvine, USAF, commanding general, 19th Air Division, has announced assignment of Col. Ernest B. Maxwell to succeed Col. Calvin W. Fite, jr., as base commander at Carswell AFB, Tex., and commander of the 7th Air Base Group. Colonel Fite will be assigned to the 7th Air Division in England.

Colonel Maxwell's prior assignment was deputy commander of the 11th Bomb Wing at Carswell.

Permit Dependent Travel

The Air Force has granted authority to the Commander-in-Chief, Alaska, and Commander-in-Chief, Northeast Command, to issue travel authorizations for eligible dependents desiring travel to those overseas commands by commercial means or TPA.

Arrangements for securing this authorization must be made by the sponsor in the overseas theater.

Such travel authorization, the Air Force said, will permit reimbursement for travel in ZI, not to exceed cost of travel from home to Port of Embarkation, and in the overseas theater from Port of Debarkation to duty station.

This procedure, officials explained, is designed to speed up travel for those personnel who locate private rental housing and desire their dependents to proceed as soon as possible.

Also, it will eliminate the necessity of maintaining quarters in both the overseas areas and the ZI for those individuals who are willing to pay the additional cost of commercial transportation.

The Air Force said a delay of two or three months is usual in arranging water transportation.

"Operation Bootstrap"

Air Force Headquarters has announced that all applicants for final semester temporary duty for the purpose of completing requirements for a college degree under the "Operation Bootstrap" program must have completed at least six months of extended active duty on current tour prior to submitting an application.

It was stated that USAFR officers must be serving in a voluntary indefinite status and must sign a Specified Period of Time agreement to remain on active duty for 18 months subsequent to completion of temporary duty.

Flight Pay Background

The current Congressional debate over flight pay recalls data compiled following World War II when Congress was told that, statistically, flight pay should amount to 62.8 per cent of base pay in return for actual monetary loss suffered by the average flying officer.

Until enactment of the Career Compensation Act on 1 Oct. 1949, flight pay was 50 per cent of base and longevity pay. Since that time the following schedule has been in effect for officers:

General	150
Lieutenant General	150
Major General	150
Brigadier General	150
Colonel	210
Lieutenant Colonel	180
Major	150
Captain	120
First Lieutenant	110
Second Lieutenant	100

The post-war study was made by non-flying officers and civilian experts who used recognized and established actuarial methods of life insurance companies.

What was ascertained was that the flying officer has an average life expectancy of 12 years less than the non-flying officer.

Analysis showed that the non-flying officer could expect to live 48 years beyond the age of 22, while the flying officer could expect to live only 36 years beyond 22.

It was reported that due to this shorter life expectancy, the average flying officer will receive $64,744 less lifetime pay than the non-flying officer (based on pre-Career Compensation Act pay scales).

The study concluded thusly: "Payment of 62.8 per cent of base and longevity pay is justified, but just compensates the average flyer for the aircraft accident fatality hazard alone in his total pay over his Army career."

"Under present flying pay regulations which provide for an additional 50 per cent of base and longevity pay for the flyer therefor," the study continued, "there is slightly less than covering payment for this hazard. There is no compensation whatsoever for the hazard of major and minor injuries, the physical and nervous strain, or for the significant if incalculable loss of 12 years of life for the average flyer."

Clothing Prices Studied

In the face of reports from the field that clothing prices at Air Force bases would be increased by 1 Oct., THE JOURNAL was told this week by officials at USAF Headquarters that no price rise will go into effect on or before that date.

An Air Force spokesman said the matter of possible price increases for clothing is now under study. He stated that Air Force officials are hopeful it will be possible to maintain clothing prices at the current levels.

It was reported that if it should become necessary to increase the cost of clothing, the Air Force will ask Department of Defense approval to increase the clothing allowance to airmen. At the present time, the initial clothing allowance is $230 a year.

JOINT CHIEFS PERSONNEL

Latest statistics reveal that 309 military personnel are now assigned to the Joint Chiefs of Staff. Additionally, the JCS has 192 civilian employees.

Reserve Medal Award

Regulations covering the award of the Armed Forces Reserve Medal have been approved by Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett.

The medal is to be awarded to individuals who have served honorably and satisfactorily for ten or more years in one or more of the Reserve components of the Armed Forces of the United States.

Similar regulations governing Coast Guard personnel will be published after approval by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Under Department of Defense regulations the 10-year service period required for award of the new Medal need not be consecutive, but the service must have been performed within 12 consecutive years, and may include Reserve service on extended active duty.

Service credits toward the Armed Forces Reserve Medal shall not include Honorary Reserve service or service for which the Naval Reserve Medal, the Organized Marine Corps Reserve Medal, or the Marine Corps Reserve Ribbon has been or may be awarded. However, an individual who is eligible to receive any of these medals may, at his election, be awarded the Armed Forces Reserve Medal.

The new Medal was authorized by Executive Order 10163 and its design will be announced later. The obverse side will be standard for all services, but the reverse will bear a distinctive design which will identify the Reserve component in which the individual is serving at the time of the award or in which he last served.

The ribbon is 1 1/2 inches long and 3/4 inches wide, composed of 13 buff and blue stripes.

A 10-year device, a bronze hour-glass with a Roman numeral "X" superimposed, is authorized to be worn on the ribbon of the Medal to denote service for each additional 10-year service period completed under the same conditions prescribed for the original award.

The Armed Forces Reserve Medal will be worn on the left breast immediately following all U. S. decorations and service medals and preceding all foreign awards. To determine eligibility for the award, "Reserve components of the Armed Forces of the United States" include:

- (1) the National Guard of the United States;
- (2) the National Guard while in the service of the United States;
- (3) the federally recognized National Guard prior to 1933;
- (4) a federally recognized status in the National Guard prior to 1933;
- (5) the Officers' Reserve Corps and the Enlisted Reserve Corps prior to the enactment of Public Law 460, 80th Congress, approved 25 Mar. 1948;
- (6) the Organized Reserve Corps;
- (7) the Army of the United States without component;
- (8) the Naval Reserve and the Naval Reserve Force, excluding those members of the Fleet Reserve and the Fleet Naval Reserve transferred thereto after completion of sixteen or more years of active naval service;
- (9) the Limited Service Marine Corps Reserve;
- (10) the Naval Militia who have conformed to the standards prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy; and
- (11) the National Naval Volunteer;
- (12) the Air National Guard;
- (13) the Air Force Reserve (Officers or Enlisted sections);
- (14) the Air Force of the United States without component; and
- (15) the Coast Guard Reserve.

When designs are approved and medals are available for distribution, they will be distributed upon application of the individual concerned to the appropriate service.

Flag Officer Changes

The Navy has cancelled orders issued in August to Rear Admirals George A. Holderness, Jr., and Wesley M. Hague.

Under new orders, Admiral Holderness will be detached this month as Commanding Officer and Director, David W. Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md., and will report for duty in the Bureau of Ships, Washington.

On 28 Aug. the Navy announced that Admiral Holderness would become Chief of the Office of Industrial Relations, relieving Admiral Hague.

Admiral Hague will continue as Chief of Industrial Relations. Under the previous orders he would have reported to the Bureau of Ships.

Reveal Personnel Plans For New '52 Strength

The Air Force will reach a total strength of 1,061,000 by the end of June 1952 in its buildup to a 95-wing strength and a breakdown of personnel categories now has been made public.

Officer and warrant officer strength will comprise about 136,000 men and women, 12.8 per cent, and there will be 925,000 airmen and aviation cadets.

Of the officers, pilot strength will reach 52,400 and there will be 13,100 other rated officers, such as navigators, bombardiers and observers.

The Air Force has revealed in Congressional hearings that fiscal year 1952 will see about 23,000 Regular and 113,000 non-Regular officers in active service, a ratio of 17 per cent Regular to 83 per cent non-Regular officers.

The Air Force is striving for "an all volunteer officer corps," and qualified Reserve and Air National Guard officers will be encouraged to remain on active duty indefinitely.

Meantime, it was disclosed that by the end of the current fiscal year, one out of every four members of the Air Force will be on duty overseas.

WAF strength will be increased to about 5 per cent of total Air Force strength.

During 1952, airmen strength will be bolstered from a 1 July size of 681,282 to 925,000. Replacement of attritional losses will require airmen procurement during the year of about 370,000.

Air Force officials expressed the hope that all airmen will continue to be brought in on a voluntary basis for a minimum period of four years. The Air Force will not hesitate to go to the draft, if necessary, it was emphasized, but enlistments during recent months have been up—27,700 in July compared with 14,000 in May.

The actual military strength of the Air Force on the last day of fiscal year 1951 was 788,381, which was 61,619 less than had been anticipated. This means that in terms of the 95-wing objective of 1,061,000, the Air Force began the current fiscal year at a 74-per cent level.

Role of Service Wife

"The importance of the role of the Army wife down through the years has been a major one as the pages of history so readily attest," according to Col. Carroll D. Hudson, commanding officer of Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala., who spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Officers' Wives' Club 11 Sept. at the Officers' Mess.

Colonel Hudson emphasized that wives of Army officers are not on the sidelines, but vicariously assist their husbands in helping to keep the world free.

"She adds charm and color to Army life by establishing a home where gracious and hospitable living prevail. Friendliness and cooperation are her watchwords," Colonel Hudson added.

The first anniversary of the club's organization was celebrated at this meeting. Mrs. James P. Hamill cut the birthday cake and Mrs. Carroll D. Hudson poured coffee. New officers installed for six-month terms are Mrs. Robert Merchant, president; Mrs. John O. Tallman, vice-president; Mrs. Charles Monyak, secretary; and Mrs. Wilbur Green, treasurer.

Construction Bill

Both Houses of Congress this week approved a military construction bill after increasing authorizations for the Army and Marine Corps by $95,580,850 and deleting entirely an authorization of $23,368,000 for an Air Force base to house two troop carrier wings at Raleigh-Durham, N. C.

A $50,000,000 additional authorization was made to the Army for warehousing and storage facilities at undetermined locations, making a total of $75,000,000 for this purpose. The Navy was given an added authorization of $45,000,000 for the expansion of Marine Corps facilities.

Originally, the House authorized an expenditure of approximately $33,000,000 for the establishment of an Air Force Base at Raleigh-Durham, N. C. The Senate recommended that the base be established at Goldsboro, N. C., and when the bill was returned to conference, the House asked that the authorization be deleted pending further consideration.

Service Pay. The Department of Defense has at last taken the step that may lead to concrete action in the matter of increasing Service pay. Assistant Secretary Anna M. Rosenberg has ordered the military departments to report to her by next week on the adequacy of existing pay scales. It was just such action by the Civil Service Commission and the other executive agencies, many months ago, that has brought virtually all the civilian employees of the Government to the present advanced state of their pay increase legislation. Congress moved rapidly this week to complete action granting civilian pay raises. The Senate and House approved increases ranging from $400 to $800 for postal employees. The Senate also voted a flat ten per cent increase retroactive to 1 July 1951 for other civilian employees including the Classified Civil Service, Foreign Service, District of Columbia teachers and firemen, judicial employees, doctors, nurses and dentists of the Veterans Administration, and Legislative branch employees. For these employees, the House voted minimum $400 pay raises, also retroactive to 1 July.

Meanwhile, the only congressional steps on service pay have been backward. An effort is being made to saddle the appropriation bill with a rider increasing the cost of living in the Armed Services by raising commissary prices. The Senate adopted another rider making pilots of the Services ineligible for proficiency flight pay when they are on administrative duty. Neither house has moved to ease the tax burden of service personnel as they did during World War II and neither Committee has reported on the Combat Pay bill which has been before them since last January. To make matters even worse, when Senator Douglas was advocating his cut in flight pay he told the Senate that the troops in Korea are now receiving Combat Pay, which, as the Services are well aware, they do not. Even the much heralded bill sponsored by Representative Kilday to iron out inequalities in the Career Compensation Act has not been completed for presentation to the Committee.

It would seem that Congress would be aware of its neglect of the uniformed services in the matter of pay, yet in its consideration of these various civilian groups no mention has been made of the fact that the rise in the cost of living hurts service families as badly as it does others. The survey by the Department may serve to bring these facts sharply before Congress.

A Completely Atomic Defense. There is a strangely familiar ring in the argument presented to Congress by Senator McMahon (D-Conn.) that by centering our defenses on atomic weapons we can cut $30 billions from the military budget. It seems to us that similar claims were made for the submarine, the tank, and the airplane when those weapons were in their infancy. Meanwhile, these tools of war have developed and shown their really vast power, but they have not supplanted the conventional means of ground and naval warfare. There is no doubt in the mind of any military, naval, or air man that atomic energy will revolutionize warfare more than any invention in history. But that it is ready now, or ever will be ready, to displace the older forms of warfare, is a matter of very serious doubt. Certainly, at this crucial and dangerous period in our national life it would be the height of folly to give up the methods and means which have preserved us and to place all our reliance on weapons so new that they have been unable to give any assistance in the war now raging today in Korea. We should follow Senator McMahon's advice to press to the utmost the development and production of atomic weapons and the indoctrination and training of our Army, Navy, and Air Force in their use, but we must not weaken our existing defenses until time and experience provide a better gauge for the future.

High Priced Commissaries

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In reference to your article of 8 September with regards to the possibility of Commissary prices being raised 18 to 20 per cent, it occurs to me that if the prices in the majority of Commissaries here in the United States are in line with the prices in the Commissary in my community then it would be cheaper by far to buy everything in local groceries.

I am now able to pay city and state sales tax and still purchase numerous items cheaper than I can in the Commissary. It is difficult to understand how a grocery store can pay high rent, utilities, license fees, and taxes, and still undersell the Commissary on a great number of staple items.

Navy Warrant Officers

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Recent legislation increasing allowances for enlisted men has helped them in their struggle against inflation. Pending legislation, such as Senator Humphreys' proposed bill to further increase allowances of enlisted persons will further reduce the burden on families of enlisted personnel if enacted.

What of the warrant officer? Recent increases in allowances have not helped his situation nor does any proposed legislation include him or his family.

Let's compare the pay and allowances of a Navy warrant officer with the pay and allowances of a senior petty officer, assuming both have three dependents.

The warrant officer receives about $5.00 more basic pay and $10.50 more ration allowance per month than the senior petty officer. The senior petty officer on the other hand receives $8.40 per month clothing allowances. The warrant officer receives no clothing allowance in spite of the fact that his clothing costs more than the enlisted man. The senior petty officer receives $85.00 per month family allowance, while the maximum rental allowance for the warrant officer is $75.00 per month, regardless of the size of his family and in spite of the fact that his officer status in most cases makes him ineligible for low-rent housing. It is readily apparent that any promotion from grade E-7 to W-1 means a loss in pay of at least $2.90 for the man with three dependents while serving within continental United States, and a loss of about $25.00 per month while serving aboard ship or outside continental United States, which is usually the case with Navy people. This situation has been brought about by well-meaning legislators who do not see the overall effect of their proposals before they are enacted. They are proposing legislation to help the families of men in the lower grades which is very admirable, but they are also destroying all incentive to advancement in many grades. These laws that provide for sea pay, clothing allowance and dependents' allowances are discriminatory in that they only apply to certain groups. They should be made applicable to everyone, if only to insure that when one is promoted one's pay will increase rather than decrease.

Soldiers' Home for WACs

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Only in a few isolated cases will families of women members of the Armed Forces be able to benefit from the proposed deductions in their pay under the Survivor Benefit plan. A similar case is the donation every payday by Regular Army enlisted women to the U. S. Soldiers Home—a donation from which it appears no enlisted woman can ever benefit.

10 Years Ago

The reorganization of the Army's air elements from the Army Air Corps to the Army Air Forces, a semi-independent organization, was rapidly nearing its completion this week.

50 Years Ago

There is a certain inexplicable backwardness in all armies in making the ability to swim as compulsory as other requirements of far less practical importance. This indifference prevails not only among landlubbers, but also among seamen.

85 Years Ago

The "first men" of the various Military Academy classes have generally maintained their positions for scientific and engineering ability, while some of the most famous and successful generals on each side of the late conflict came from among those pretty well down on the class lists.

REVERSING their previous attitude the Communist forces in Korea this week requested a resumption of the armistice talks at Kaesong. Negotiations were suspended by the Reds on 23 Aug., with the statement that they would not be reopened until satisfactory explanations had been received from the United Nations concerning a series of alleged truce violations by the Allies with assurances against their recurrence. Allied investigation failed to substantiate the charges of the Reds, which were denounced as fabrications, and the suspension of the discussions remained in effect for nearly a month.

In the interim the Reds made several new charges of Allied violations of the Kaesong truce zone, and one of these was admitted by General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, Commander-in-Chief of United Nations Forces. This was a case in which an American aviator machine-gunned buildings in Kaesong at night. It was determined that this attack resulted from a navigational error. There were no casualties and the property damage was inconsequential. In acknowledging blame for the incident General Ridgway suggested that if the Communists wished to reopen armistice negotiations they should arrange a meeting of liaison officers of both sides to determine conditions for their resumption.

Soon after this note was dispatched the Reds complained of a new truce violation, the "invasion" of the Kaesong zone by four unarmed South Korean medical soldiers of an anti-infestation unit. They had lost their way and wandered into the Kaesong area. They were released by the Reds after appropriate explanations. Immediately thereafter the Communists asked that armistice negotiations be resumed. Apparently the Reds no longer insist that the Allies accept blame for all the alleged truce violations with which they have been charged, but feel rather that the matter can be adjusted satisfactorily by the conferees. However, they insist that the talks continue at Kaesong, instead of some other point as suggested by General Ridgway.

Resumption of the truce negotiations does not assure a cessation of hostilities, but the fact that the Communists proposed a renewal of discussions may indicate that their previous intransigent attitude may be somewhat modified. A principal point of difference has been the location of the proposed dividing line between opposing forces. The Reds have been insistent on the 38th parallel, whereas the United Nations delegation wants it along the present battle line, which throughout most of its length is considerably farther north.

Prime Minister Clement Attlee this week called for new British parliamentary elections to be held on 25 Oct. The present Labor government of England has a slim majority of only a few votes in the House of Commons, and is faced not only with strong Conservative opposition to most of its domestic policies, but also with internal Labor party dissension over the rising expenditures for rearmament. Many observers predict a Conservative victory in the coming elections, which are likely to be decided largely on domestic issues. A change in government would probably mean no important change in British foreign policy.

MEMBERS of the Council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, meeting in Ottawa this week, unanimously decided to recommend to their governments the admission of Greece and Turkey to the Atlantic Alliance. Since the Council is composed of the foreign ministers and other top-level representatives of the twelve countries which are members of the Atlantic Union the admission of the two Mediterranean countries is expected to be granted in the near future.

Some opposition to the American resolution to admit the two new members was expressed, particularly by Denmark and Norway, but the final vote was unanimous, as is required by the Atlantic Pact. Action was deferred temporarily while the Danish delegation sought new instructions from Copenhagen. The government of Denmark then authorized its representatives to favor the proposal.

The principal objection to admission of the two was based on the fact that they are not, strictly speaking, Atlantic countries, since their territory does not touch on that ocean. Further, there was some fear that these countries were more open to Communist aggression than the other members, and their admission might increase the danger of a general war. Also there was some suspicion that American military aid under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program might be spread somewhat thinner, if the membership were enlarged. It was felt by some that they should be members of a new regional defense grouping of Mediterranean countries.

THESE OBJECTIONS lacked validity, since both countries, though not in the North Atlantic, are as much entitled to membership as their Mediterranean neighbor, Italy, which has been a member since the inception of the organization. Both are anti-Communist democracies and an attack on either would probably start a general war, whether or not they were members of the Atlantic Alliance. Formation of a new Mediterranean alliance would take at least a year and it would be difficult to reconcile the differences of the smaller Mediterranean countries, such as the Arab states and Israel. American aid in the rearmament of Greece and Turkey has been granted in the past and would be continued, even though these countries remained outside the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Council received an urgent appeal from General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of Atlantic Pact Forces in Europe, for acceleration in military preparations, and for broader powers for himself in the organization and development of a European defense force. The message from the general was submitted to the Council by the Standing Group, the senior military planning agency of the alliance. General Eisenhower expressed some impatience with the somewhat roundabout way in which he must contact various governments through the Standing Group.

While members of the Council were generally sympathetic with General Eisenhower's desire for more troops and for a faster build-up of European defenses there was some apprehension that greater military expenditures would seriously impair the economic situation in some of the countries. The request of the Supreme Commander will be continuously studied, with a view to possible favorable action at the next meeting of the Council in Rome.

Representatives of some of the smaller nations indicated that they were somewhat dissatisfied with the present arrangement whereby the Standing Group, on which only the United States, France, and Great Britain are represented, is responsible for all strategic plans for the mutual defense of Atlantic Pact countries. There were indications that an early meeting of the Military Committee, on which all 12 member nations are represented, would be called to inform all the countries of the current plans developed by the Standing Group.

PREMIER ALCEIDE de GASPERI of Italy received considerable support in the Council in his appeal for revision of the Italian peace treaty to abolish some of its discriminatory provisions. It is pointed out that the Italian treaty is much less liberal than the recently completed Japanese treaty and the proposed "peace contract" with Western Germany. In particular, the Italian premier insists on an early adjudication of the dispute with Yugoslavia over Trieste, over which Italy claims sovereignty on the basis of the Big Three declaration of 1948, and also because it is regarded as essential to Italian security. Italy also urges elimination of armament restrictions in order to be in a position to make a larger military contribution to the defense of Western Europe.

The United States representatives at the Ottawa conference were Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, Economic Cooperation Administrator William C. Foster, who has been nominated to be Deputy Secretary of Defense, and Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr. Mr. Charles M. Spofford, Chairman of the North Atlantic Council of Deputies, was Deputy United States Representative. General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, USA, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was one of several senior advisers to the United States delegation.

Prior to going to Ottawa, Secretary of State Acheson, Foreign Minister Herbert Morrison of England, and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France met in Washington and agreed to recommend to their governments the concession of a "peace contract" to West Germany. Since Germany is divided into Allied and Russian zones and the Russians have declined to cooperate with the western powers, the proposed arrangement would not be the negotiation of a formal peace treaty with a unified Germany, but an interim contract, whereby the present occupation status would be greatly liberalized and West Germany would be practically restored to full sovereignty. Under the plan, West Germany would contribute manpower and other military resources to Western European defense.

CHANCELLOR KONRAD ADENAUER of the West German Republic hailed the proposal as the restoration of his country to full equality in the society of nations, but many Germans openly oppose the plan, because it envisages a practical defensive alliance with western democracies and at least a partial rearmament. A public opinion poll estimates that 79 per cent of West German men between the ages of 18 and 30 object to military service in any European army. Preliminary negotiations looking to the eventual formulation of the new contract are expected to begin next week with conferences between Allied High Commissioners and officials of the German Republic. However, it is expected that it will take several months to complete all arrangements for the completion of the new agreement.

Marine Corps Commandant—In less than four months, the Marine Corps may have a new Commandant. The tour of General Clifton B. Cates, present head of the Corps, expires on 1 Jan. 1952, and it is expected that the President will name a successor sometime in October.

There is a possibility that General Cates might be re-appointed to the post, but since he would reach the statutory retirement age before the end of his second term, it is believed that a new Commandant will be named.

Already conjecture has arisen as to who will be selected. At present, the Marine Corps has four lieutenant generals, all of whom are eligible for the position. These are, in order of seniority, Graves B. Erskine, Franklin A. Hart, Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., and Merwin H. Silverthorn.

Most observers indicate a belief that the President will nominate General Shepherd for the post. It is well known in the Corps that he was considered for the job at the time of General Cates' appointment. At that time, it was reported that President Truman called the two officers in and told them he found them both highly qualified for the job, but that he was going to appoint General Cates because of his seniority. General Shepherd had been recommended by the out-going Commandant, General A. A. Vandegrift.

It is also possible that Mr. Truman might by-pass all four of the senior officers and dip into the two-star ranks for his nominee. Two junior officers who have been mentioned prominently in this respect are Major Generals Oliver P. Smith and William J. Wallace. Both officers have had outstanding careers and such action would not be without precedent.

In 1864, upon the death of Colonel-Commandant John Harris, the then Secretary of the Navy Gideon Welles retired all of the Corps' senior officers and appointed Maj. Jacob Zellin as Commandant. Again, in 1936, a similar situation developed when the President by-passed the top Marine general officers and named a relatively junior and younger officer, Brig. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, to fill the position. General Holcomb was the first Marine Commandant to be elevated to three-star rank.

Although the actual nomination of a Marine head is made by the President, both the out-going Commandant and the Secretary of the Navy are instrumental in making the selection. If tradition is followed, General Cates will recommend an officer to Navy Secretary Dan A. Kimball. Mr. Kimball, in turn, may either approve the recommendation and pass it on to the President, or substitute an officer of his own choice.

Mr. Truman has several alternatives. He may nominate either the officer suggested by General Cates and approved by Mr. Kimball, an alternate recommended by the Navy Secretary alone, or an officer of his own choosing. Past procedure, however, indicates that the President will lean favorably in the direction of the Navy Secretary's choice.

It is also possible for Mr. Truman to reappoint General Cates for another four-year term. The present Commandant, however, is 58 and would reach the Marine Corps statutory retirement age of 62 some five months before the end of a second tour, should he be re-named. Also, with the exception of General Holcomb who served during the World War II years, no officer since 1929 has held the billet for a period of more than four years.

Observers say that General Cates would probably not look with favor upon a re-appointment. The present Commandant has voiced a belief that the Marine Corps is currently at its zenith, and it seems likely that he would be willing to step down after a successful tour of duty—content in the knowledge that he has handled his assignment well.

Casualty-Retirement Ratio—Defense officials have revealed that approximately 15 per cent of the casualties in Korea are retired ultimately for disability. It was reported that average hospitalization prior to retirement is closer to 12 months than to the six months period originally anticipated.

Turkey in the Foxhole—To insure that U. S. servicemen in the Pacific, particularly those in Korea, will be able to enjoy traditional Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's menus, officials at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation already have begun the shipment of huge stocks of special foodstuffs. The non-perishable items for the Thanksgiving menu are now en route and during the first week of October the perishable items—turkeys, fresh fruits and fresh vegetables—will be loaded aboard reefer ships. In October, Christmas and New Year's Day non-perishables will be shipped, and in November the perishables for the December-January holidays go out.

"The Thanksgiving menu of the Far East Command starts out with shrimp cocktail," Army officials relate. "The roast turkey will be stuffed with good old-fashioned cornbread dressing. The snowflake potatoes will be hidden with giblet gravy. Cranberry sauce, candied yams, fresh frozen peas, corn, hearts of lettuce, celery stuffed with American cheese, French dressing, pickles, olives, hard candy, nuts, apples, oranges and fruit cake will leave little room for the mincemeat pie, pumpkin pie, hot rolls, bread and butter, fruit punch and coffee."

And the quantity? Over 2,650,000 lbs. of turkey alone is being procured by the San Francisco Quartermaster Market Center for the big holidays overseas.

Scratch-Pad Economy—Strategic Air Command headquarters at Offutt AFB, Nebr., recently solved two headaches simultaneously by converting all waste clippings from offset press machines into scratch pads. Not only did it solve the problem of disposing of the scraps, but it saves the $500 formerly spent monthly in the purchase of scratch pads. The idea was conceived by Col. Glenn P. Nell, Adjutant General and Commandant at SAC Hqs. About 4,000 pads are consumed monthly by SAC Headquarters.

Guard to Use Former Race Track—The Maryland Military Department has been authorized to buy for $500,000 the Havre de Grace, Md., race track property to replace Camp Ritchie, Md., as a National Guard training site. Camp Ritchie has been sold to the Federal Government for $2.3 million.

A committee of National Guard officers unanimously recommended that the 118-acre Havre de Grace facility be purchased. A non-participant in the study was Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Adjutant General of Maryland, who is also president of Havre de Grace.

The race track property had been appraised by private appraisers at $915,688.

School of War Sciences—Press reports from Paris told this week of plans for an Allied School of War Sciences under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Students would be drawn from young field grade officers of the treaty nations, it was reported. The first class probably will have 40 to 60 officers.

Musical Air Force—To provide sufficient musical instruments for its bands, the Air Force has asked Congress for $584,000 during the current fiscal year. Testimony on Capitol Hill revealed that the Air Force now has 87 bands, with a standard musical organization comprising 28 men and a leader. It was reported that there is a band for each 13,000 airmen.

"Never Underestimate the Power of a WAF"—Officials at Air Force Headquarters report that 179 WAFs have been assigned to duty at the Pentagon. They have replaced 236 male airmen.

By mid-October, an additional 60 WAFs will be on duty at USAF Headquarters. How many male airmen they will replace has not been told.

New Infantry School Insignia—Personnel of the Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., are scheduled to replace the Third Army patch with a new Infantry School shoulder sleeve insignia. The blue field with the white "Follow Me" motto and the white bayonet will be worn on the winter uniforms by personnel assigned to spaces at the Infantry School, 30th Regimental Combat Team (school demonstration troops), and the commandant and his personal staff.

Heads Tokyo Finance Office—Col. Edgar E. Enger recently assumed the duties of Commanding Officer of the Tokyo Finance Office. He arrived in Japan in Dec. 1950 and was assigned as commanding officer of the 179th Finance Disbursing Section, Yokohama, prior to his recent assignment.

Senator Douglas Misinformed—To thousands of Army and Marine Corps foot soldiers in Korea it came as a distinct surprise last week that Congress believes they are still receiving $10 a month combat pay.

During debate on his amendment to the defense appropriations bill restricting flying pay, Senator Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), was asked by Senator J. Allen Frear, jr. (D-Del.), "whether there is any additional pay given the foot soldier who faces the enemy in battle, other than his regular pay?"

Senator Douglas replied forthwith: "He receives combat pay." Asked how much Senator Douglas stated: "Under the present schedule, it amounts to $10 a month, or from one-tenth to one-twentieth of amounts given for flight pay of desk officers in the Air Force and Naval aviation."

The Senator from Illinois, in response to further questioning about who gets this combat pay, declared: "The sole criterion is that a soldier must be in the combat area. Naturally, it would not be based upon 24 hours' duty in combat, but upon his being in a combat area, which is sometimes loosely defined."

Senator Douglas' allusion to a loose definition was apropos, for the fact of the matter is that the Senator is almost exactly two years late with his information.

Ever since enactment of the Career Compensation Act on 1 Oct. 1949, combat pay for foot soldiers has been eliminated.

The truth is that the ground soldier in Korea receives exactly the same pay, rank for rank, as is received by a soldier in the United States or anywhere else.

What Senator Douglas doubtless was referring to is the fact that enlisted men awarded the Combat Infantryman's Badge formerly received $10 a month. But that payment was ended with passage of the Career Compensation Act.

Meantime, nothing has been done in months regarding the Department of Defense bill which would provide combat pay for ground force personnel. The Senate Armed Services Committee did hold several hearings on the combat pay bill, but then action on the legislation was dropped. Apparently, no effort is being made to revive the hearings, although it is known that the bill has considerable support in Congress which would be brought into play if hearings were resumed.

But as of the moment, the situation regarding combat pay for foot soldiers is just this: Until the Career Compensation Act, they had it—$10 a month; now they don't have it—Senator Douglas notwithstanding; in the future they could have it—provided that Congress takes action on the Department's bill.

Ships of the Fleet—Lt. Comdr. William P. Willis, jr., former exec of the guppy-snorkel submarine Tiru, has assumed command of the submarine Greenfish. He relieved Comdr. Murray B. Frazee, who has been assigned to the office of the Judge Advocate General.

Two other submarines in the news are the Sabalo and the Cabezon. The Sabalo, commanded by Lt. Comdr. Lawrence Savadkin, has joined Submarine Division 72 of the Pacific Fleet. The Cabezon, commanded by Lt. Comdr. Joseph C. Wheeler, jr., recently rescued a pilot, Lt. Jack B. Braley, USN, who was forced to ditch his plane in the ocean. Fireman Kenneth C. Doss went over the side to bring in the exhausted pilot who was in the water for three hours.

Comdr. Ralph E. Styles, recently selected for captain, is the new commander of Submarine Division 72. He had previously served on the war plans staff of the Caribbean Sea Frontier, San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Two destroyer escorts, the USS Foss and the USS Wiseman, have arrived on the West Coast after 10 months in Korean waters. The Wiseman is commanded by Lt. Comdr. Jay W. Land, and the Foss by Lt. Comdr. Roger E. Spreen.

The USS Pine Island, a large seaplane tender formerly attached to Commander Air Force, Pacific Fleet, has arrived at San Diego after nine months in Western Pacific waters. She was relieved by the Salisbury Sound.

The battleship Iowa is completing trial runs off the West Coast preparatory to being added to the Pacific Fleet. All three of the vessel's sister ships—the Missouri, Wisconsin, and New Jersey—are already in service. The big dreadnaught is commanded by Capt. W. R. Smedberg.

General Benson's Flags—Presentation by Chinese Nationalist Forces officers of a flag with the flaming sun device sent from Formosa has raised to 31 the number of foreign flags in the collection of Brig. Gen. Otis O. Benson, jr., MC, USAF, commandant of the Air Force School of Aviation Medicine, Randolph AFB, Tex. The 31 flags were presented by foreign officers who have graduated from the school.

Two Navy Planes to Carry Atomic Bomb—The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William M. Fechteler, revealed this week that two Navy planes are now equipped to carry the atomic bomb, and that trained crews are ready to assemble and install the bombs aboard carriers. The two planes are the North American AJ-1, a combination piston-jet designed plane, which is the heaviest carrier-based model operated by the Navy (it is still unnamed); and the Lockheed P2V-2 Neptune, which also has been launched from and landed aboard Navy carriers.

Admiral Fechteler said that trends in the development of the atomic bomb are being followed by the Navy in its plane characteristics. Fleet exercises now being conducted in the Atlantic will simulate the employment of the bomb "both offensively and by the enemy," he said.

Coast Guard Flight Pay—If Congress should vote to restrict proficiency flight pay as stipulated in the Senate version of the 1952 defense appropriations bill, the Coast Guard would also be affected, although not covered by this legislation. Coast Guard officials indicated this week that whatever policy is adopted for the Navy will be followed by the Coast Guard, despite the fact that the latter Service is carried in the Treasury Department budget and not in the Department of Defense budget.

It was reported that at the present time there are 19 aviation officers on duty at Coast Guard Headquarters in Washington, D. C. Apparently, if the Senate-House conferees should sustain the Senate flight pay action, some or all of these 19 officers could suffer a loss of flight pay.

Defends Dependent Travel—During recent Congressional budget hearings, the question was asked as to whether or not dependent travel to foreign danger zones should be reduced. From Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg came this response:

"I saw nothing in Berlin or in West Germany that was a greater morale builder for the Germans to hold out against communism than the fact that our families were there. They thought we meant business if the families were there, and they felt we were sharing a risk that is worth their sharing if we are going to share it. It is, of course, a tremendous morale builder for our own men."

Flight Pay

"will eliminate the aviation 'grave planes' whereby large numbers of administrative and maintenance personnel enjoy the largess which we have been indiscriminately providing for them."

The Illinois legislator, who served with the Marine Corps during World War II, said "it surely does not make sense that an Air Force second lieutenant on duty at the Pentagon should receive, as an addition to his regular salary, for the few hours a month he spends in the air, more than the infantryman or the sailor receives a month as his total pay for 24 hours' duty a day."

Flight pay, said Senator Douglas, "should serve merely as compensation for hazardous duty. It need not serve as an incentive to attract and keep young men in one particular branch of the services," he continued. "Maintaining such a avored instrument is not only wasteful, but it also deteriorates the morale of all our servicemen."

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass.), a member of the Armed Services Committee, questioned whether the issue of flight pay should be decided during debate on an appropriations bill. He suggested that this was a matter of Armed Services Committee hearings.

Senator Saltonstall called attention to the Air Force position that flying officers on administrative assignments must remain proficient in flight responsibilities. He referred to the assignment of Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, USAF, to command U. S. Air Forces in Europe and stated: "If there is taken away from a man like General Norstad the opportunity to fly when he is an administrative officer, it is made difficult for him to go overseas and become the head of the flying forces there."

General Stone's Letter

In this connection, Senator O'Mahoney introduced into the debate a letter from Lt. Gen. Charles B. Stone III, USAF, Deputy Chief of Staff, Comptroller, concerning the need for maintenance of flying proficiency. The text of General Stone's letter follows:

"Dear Senator O'Mahoney: In line with our telephone conversation this morning, the following information is offered with respect to the necessity and advisability of flying of officers on administrative type duties continuing to maintain their flying proficiency. It is frequently alleged that flying officers ordered to Washington are engaged in administrative type duties which do not entail requirement of maintaining flying proficiency.

"Basic decisions affecting the support and employment of air power emanate from the Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C. Leadership of United States Air Force air power, therefore, emanates from Washington. The question of maintenance of flying proficiency, of flying officers on duty in Washington directly involves, consequently, the status and qualifications of those who are responsible for air leadership.

"The best qualified individuals in the Air Force in their particular spheres of activity are ordered to Washington to exercise air leadership. Washington leadership must be based upon a thorough knowledge of field and battle conditions. Human and technical factors involved in flying must be first-hand knowledge to Washington leaders since the decisions affect flyers and flying operations. Our enemies in World War II did not appreciate this concept of air leadership and made costly mistakes in the employment of air power to the great benefit of the Western Allies.

"Duty in Washington is not sought after by Air Force officers. They have great difficulty in maintaining flying proficiency in Washington due to limitation of facilities, transportation difficulties, and the like. Flying officers feel that to do their job they must maintain their flying proficiency. They can do this easier away from Washington. If now it is determined that rated officers ordered to Washington need not fly, every effort will be made by qualified officers who can contribute to air-power leadership to avoid Washington duty. The morale of Air Force leadership would be seriously impaired. The incentive to maintain flying proficiency and to become familiar with the latest developments in air weapons from a pilot's point of view will cease. Flying leadership of the air arm will be of second-rate nature. The Nation's air arm will suffer.

"It has been the policy of the Chief of Staff in order to maintain a high grade of qualified leadership in Washington and in the field to rotate officers in and out of Washington. For example, a few of the officers who occupy key positions on the Air staff are listed as follows with their field command duties indicated:

"Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff; Twelfth Air Force (European theater of operations); Ninth Air Force.

"Gen. N. F. Twining, Vice Chief of Staff; Twentieth Air Force; Air Technical Service Command.

"Lt. Gen. O. R. Cook, Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel; Seventh Air Service Area Command; Headquarters, Air Materiel Command.

"Lt. Gen. T. D. White, Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations; Thirteenth Air Force; Fifth Air Force.

"Lt. Gen. C. B. Stone III, Deputy Chief of Staff, Comptroller; India-Burma theater; Fourteenth Air Force.

"Maj. Gen. E. S. Wetzel, Acting Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel; Fifteenth Air Force.

"Maj. Gen. R. M. Ramey, Director of Operations, Deputy Chief of Staff, Operations; Eighth Air Force (Strategic Air Command).

"Maj. Gen. E. W. Anderson, Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff, Comptroller; Sixty-

THE Army Chief of Staff and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins entertained from 6 to 8, on 14 Sept. at a reception at the Ft. Lesley J. McNair Officers' Club, honoring General of the Army Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, the French High Commissioner of Indo-China. In the receiving line with General and Mrs. Collins and General de Lattre were the French Ambassador and Madame Henri Bonnet.

Madame de Lattre was not present, due to the fact that she is still in deep mourning for her son, Lt. Bernard de Lattre, who was recently killed in the fighting in Indo-China, and she is accepting no invitations to large gatherings.

Later the same evening, General and Mrs. Collins were hosts at a dinner, at their quarters at Ft. McNair, for General and Madame de Lattre. The guest list included Ambassador and Madame Bonnet, Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge, General John E. Hull, Army Vice Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Hull, the Honorable William C. Bullitt, former U. S. Ambassador to France, the U. S. Minister to Indo-China and Mrs. Donald R. Heath, and Mr. John McCloy, U. S. High Commissioner to Germany.

On 19 Sept. Mrs. Collins entertained at a luncheon at the Officers' Club at Ft. McNair, in honor of Madame de Lattre. The guests attending were the wives of high Defense officials, the wives of the French Standing Group and personal friends of Madame de Lattre.

Mrs. Charles Pearre Cabell, wife of Maj. Gen. Cabell, USAF, who has been travelling in the West this summer with their sons, Charles Jr., and Ben, visiting relatives, has returned to Washington, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Catherine Cabell, who spent the summer with her grandmother, Mrs. C. J. de Hymel in Pasadena.

Plans are going forward for the benefit luncheon which will be followed by a fashion show to be given 2 Oct., at 12:30 P.M., by the Daughters of the U. S.

Flight Pay

seventh Combat Wing, Eighth Air Force; First Fighter Command, Mitchell Field.

"Likewise, a few of the officers who have served on the Air Staff and are currently engaged in command of field units are listed as follows:

"Lt. Gen. C. E. LeMay: Commanding general, Strategic Air Command.
"Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad: Commander in Chief, United States Air Force in Europe.
"Lt. Gen. E. E. Partridge: Commanding general, Air Research and Development Command.

"Lt. Gen. O. P. Weyland: Commanding general, Far East Air Forces.

"Maj. Gen. F. F. Everest: Commanding general, Fifth Air Force.

"Maj. Gen. D. C. Strother: Commanding general, Twelfth Air Force, United States Air Force in Europe.

"Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Jr.: Commanding general, Fifteenth Air Force (Strategic Air Command).

"Usually the reason for advocates of eliminating flying training from the duties of Washington rated officers is occasioned by the thought that considerable savings in money will be entailed. An estimate of the amount of dollars which would be saved if this were put into effect at the present strength of rated officers on duty in the Air Staff is approximately $2,500,000. This minor amount of savings would in no sense compensate for the dilatory effect upon those responsible for air leadership. The tremendous harm to the effectiveness of the Nation's air arm as a result of lowered leadership effectiveness could be disastrous.

"Sincerely,

"CHARLES B. STONE III.
"Lieutenant General, United States Air Force, Deputy Chief of Staff, Comptroller."

Senator Douglas said he estimated that "more than half the flying pay and flying costs go down the drain in the payment of flight pay to air personnel who are not on flight duty, but on administrative and ground duty, but who are given the opportunity to go up in the air in order to get the 'gravy.'"

In his unsuccessful effort to block passage of the amendment, Senator O'Mahoney told his colleagues that a vote for Senator Douglas' proviso "amounts to a conviction without trial upon an allegation unsupported by evidence."

As passed by the Senate, the amendment reads as follows: "No part of an appropriation contained in this act shall be available for the payment of flight pay to personnel whose assigned duties do not involve actual combat missions or do not involve flight in excess of 20 hours per month."

Senator Cain's Statement

On Monday, 17 Sept., Senator Harry Cain (R-Wash.), a member of the Armed Services Committee, took the floor of the Senate to express his concern over the effects of Senator Douglas' amendment, particularly as regards the Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve.

Said Senator Cain:

"It can be conservatively anticipated that the requirement for increasing flying time for rated personnel will be impossible of achievement.

"Rated personnel of Air National Guard units and Air Reserve units have full-time civilian occupations. Those who are most valuable to these units, such as commanders, have considerable burdens of responsibility in addition to individual flying proficiency. They must command, train, direct, and lead the members of their units. The members of the units, in turn, have varied technical duties in addition to the maintenance of their individual flying proficiency. The time allotted to this training is fully and completely consumed in the performance of these combined flying duties, technical duties, and related training activities.

"It is my understanding of the problem that the requirements of this amendment would serve seriously to endanger the continued existence of this program.

"It is well known to all of us that the Regular Air Force Establishment depends on the existence of trained Air National Guard units and Air Reserve units to contribute a vital part of our military air effort in time of emergency.

"The flying proficiency of rated personnel of the Air Force is very carefully guarded on a continuing basis. An average of 1,000 flying officers are suspended from flying status each year as a result of the Air Force policy to eliminate unfit or unqualified flying personnel. At the present time, the United States Air Force requires all flying officers to fly a minimum of 100 hours a year. As Senators know, this is considerably in excess of the minimum requirements established by law. As a part of this yearly minimum, pilots must fly at least 20 hours of instrument flying and at least 15 hours at night.

"Flying pay for general officers in the Air Force has already been substantially reduced to an amount less than that received by many of the officers junior to them and who are engaging in more extensive flying activities. We have learned through experience the vital importance of our Air Force leaders retaining an active flying status. If the senior officers are to be held responsible for making decisions in which the lives of flying personnel and the success of the missions depend, they must be active flyers. They must not lose their grasp of either the technical or the human factors involved in the operation of modern combat aircraft.

"The training, direction, and leadership of our Air Forces must continue to be the responsibility of active flying general officers. The investment which the country has made in this vital element of our security must continue to have the finest and most capable leadership it is possible to obtain.

"Mr. President, I think we ought to move slowly and with caution when we run the risk of jeopardizing the quality of our Air Force leadership at a time when we are placing increasing demands on the Air Force for expansion of its combat readiness to face the increasing threat to our Nation's security."

Navy Viewpoint Presented

President Frank A. Hecht of the Navy League of the United States, in a statement on 19 Sept., criticized the action of the Senate on flight pay. Mr. Hecht said: "Service personnel today are underpaid. Just this week the Senate authorized a pay increase for federal employees. There is pending a bill to grant a pay increase to postal employees. Many of the unions have escalator clauses which grant automatic pay increases when the cost of living index goes up. The last pay increase that service personnel received was effective 1 Oct. 1949. That was so small as to be meaningless because at the same time Congress removed income tax exemptions. Now the Senate seeks to deprive aviation personnel of money awarded them because of the extra hazards involved in flying."

Mr. Hecht pointed out that the Naval Air Reserve Training program would be seriously hit by this limitation. The Navy League spokesman said: "The syllabus of the Week-End Warriors of the Naval Air Reserve Training Program calls for only 100 hours flying time during the entire year. When you deprive these young aviators of flight pay it will be difficult to induce them to leave their homes and families for two weeks annual training duty when the compensation they receive will be less than most of them are making at their jobs. Also, if you remove the inducement of flight pay, you will find that most of them will not go out to their Naval Air Stations to fly on week-ends."

Mr. Hecht pointed out that in the month of June, 74% of all combat sorties flown by the Navy and Marine Corps in Korea were flown by reserve aviators. Hecht added, "The Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard will be faced with a similar problem."

Build Landing Ships

Award of contracts for construction of thirteen landing ships tanks (LST's) for a total cost of more than $40,000,000 was announced by the Navy Bureau of Ships this week.

Companies awarded contracts, and the number of ships they will build, are the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Maine, three ships; Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation, Pascagoula, Miss., five ships; Christy Corporation, Sturgeon Bay, Wisc., five ships.

The thirteen LST's to be built under this program are modifications of two experimental LST's built during World War II.

AF-Industry Reveals Defense Speed-Up

A series of announcements have been made during the past week by Air Force and aviation industry officials emphasizing the speed-up in defense activities.

Coincidental with Air Force disclosure that the Army Chief of Engineers has been asked to acquire Palmdale Airport in Los Angeles County, Calif., for the final assembly and testing of aircraft, the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation of Burbank, Calif., told of plans to construct a $12,615,000 aircraft assembly plant at Palmdale—an edge-of-the-desert community 65 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Lockheed President Robert E. Gross said the new facility, planned for final assembly and test flying of Lockheed T-33, TO-2 and F-94 jet planes, would employ several thousand persons ultimately. A letter contract for the desert development at Palmdale Airport has been signed by officials of Lockheed and the Air Materiel Command.

Meantime, it was reported that sales of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation totaled $98,054,000 during the first half of 1951. In the same period of 1950, sales were $84,479,117. A report to stockholders disclosed that Lockheed's backlog, including current letters of intent, has passed the billion-dollar mark.

"We are in the first stages of a defense program planned to reach its peak in 1952," President Gross reported.

Firm contracts are divided 58.7 per cent Air Force, 30.4 per cent Navy, and 10.9 per cent commercial. Purely commercial backlog was placed at $97,568,000 30 June. It now exceeds $100,000,000, highest in Lockheed history, with 68 Super Constellation orders by seven airlines.

Gross reported these highlights of Lockheed's program: production progressing of F-94B and F-94C jet fighters; tooling started for F-94D; T-33 and TO-2 jet trainer output rising to highest level for any plane since World War II; T-33 manufacture by Canada licensed; large quantities of P2V patrol bombers being built for U.S. Navy, Great Britain and Australia; commercial and military Super Constellation production assured through 1953; preparations progressing for B-47 jet bomber manufacture at federally owned facility at Marietta, Ga.; three new models, including first turboprop all-cargo transport XC-130 for Air Force, under development.

AF Overhaul Contract

Pacific Airmotive Corporation announces receipt of a new Air Force contract in the amount of $3,500,000 for the overhaul of an undisclosed number of large four-engine Air Force cargo-transport planes, the type used in the Tokyo Air Lift operation, according to Thomas Wolfe, Company President. The Air Force contract is a partial allocation in connection with the year's program running in excess of six million dollars, and is devoted exclusively to cycle overhaul of airframes. This work will be processed at PAC's facilities at Pacific Airmotive Airport in Chino, California. This contract increases PAC's backlog to over $11,000,000.

Chief Scientific Adviser

Dr. Harold V. Gaskill, Dean of the Division of Science at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, has been appointed Civilian Deputy to Chief of Research and Development, Department of the Army.

In this newly-created Army position Dr. Gaskill will act as chief scientific adviser to the Army's Research and Development Division.

Dr. Gaskill, who is also on leave as the Director of the Science Research Institute at Iowa State, was Director of War Research there from 1939 to 1948. In this capacity he administered a wide variety of defense research contracts for the Office of Scientific Research and Development, the Army and the Navy. These World War II contracts included projects in physics, chemistry, bacteriology, mycology, psychology, and other vital fields. He also supervised a major project in atomic energy research at Iowa State under contract with the Manhattan District.

Canadair Builds Trainers

"Electric Boat Company's aircraft manufacturing subsidiary, Canadair Limited, will hire an additional 3,000 workers and begin immediate production on an order for T-33 jet trainers for the Canadian Department of Defense Production," Mr. John Jay Hopkins, President of Electric Boat Company and President and Chairman of Canadair Limited, said this week.

Mr. Hopkins' statement followed the announcement that Canadair would build the trainer, a two-seat aircraft developed from the single seat Shooting Star fighter, designed by Lockheed Aircraft Corporation of Burbank, Calif.

With other defense contracts recently announced, and for which employees are now being hired, Mr. Hopkins stated that the additional employees would raise Canadair's work force to approximately 18,000.

Awarding the contract to Canadair came on the heels of announcements that the Beech U.S.A.F. T-36, a newly designed two-engine transport trainer, would be built for the U. S. Air Force by Electric Boat Company's subsidiary. Today's contract marks the company's third important defense assignment within the past two years for the production of aircraft, which includes mass production of F-86 Sabre jets for the R.C.A.F.

Coincident with the announcement of the T-33 contract, the 100th F-86 moved off the production lines today at Canadair.

New Navy Jet Fighter

Letters of intent for the production of the Navy's newest jet fighter, the McDonnell F3H-1 DEMON, have been awarded to the McDonnell Aircraft Corporation, St. Louis, Mo., and the Goodyear Aircraft Corporation, Akron, Ohio.

The experimental version of this new carrier-based fighter, designated the XF3H-1, successfully completed its first flight at the McDonnell plant, Lambert Field, St. Louis, on 7 August.

Repair MSTs Vessels

Contracts totaling $155,258 were awarded to private San Francisco Bay Area shipyards from 16 Aug. to 29 Aug., Rear Adm. Harry Sanders, USN, Commander, Military Sea Transportation Service, Pacific, has announced.

Largest single contract of $83,224 went to Moore Dry Dock Company for drydocking, annual inspection and voyage repairs to the USNS Pvt. Leonard C. Brostrom.

Bethlehem Pacific Coastal Steel Corporation was awarded a contract of $63,199 for drydocking, annual inspection and voyage repairs to the USNS Lt. Raymond O. Beaudoin. Todd Shipyard Corporation, San Francisco Division, was awarded a contract of $4,780 for repairs to two propellers. West Winds, Inc., was awarded $2,410 for voyage repairs to the USNS Sgt. Jack J. Pendleton. A contract of $1,645 was awarded the Martinolich Ship Repair Company for voyage repairs to the USNS General John Pope.

Army Uses T.V. for Tng.

The Army Signal Corps will shortly start experiments with a mobile television system capable of transmitting pictures from relatively remote field activities to military classrooms. Described by electronics engineers as one of the most complete television stations ever mounted on wheels, the system also is intended to stimulate tactical uses of television.

It will be used to explore the feasibility of television for field instruction, and to develop instructional techniques via TV. The equipment is expected to be of value in televising intricate field exercises and "piping" the pictures to expert observers, maneuver umpires, or to classrooms.

The equipment is housed in four special buses, each 31 feet long. It was conceived in the Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories, Ft. Monmouth, N. J., and built by the Radio Corporation of America, under an Army research and development contract. Included are three field TV cameras, 10 receivers, a large-screen TV projector which will show life-size pictures, intercommunication radio facilities, power units, and complete microwave transmitting, monitoring, and receiving equipment. Portability of equipment has been emphasized.

The system will not be used directly for television broadcasts. Programs picked up in the field will be "piped" to military classrooms, or to a broadcasting station, by microwave radio link and/or coaxial cable. If they go to a broadcast station, they will then be transmitted in the usual manner. If they are "piped" to classrooms the microwave radio link and/or coaxial cable will carry the programs to a mobile display unit equipped with television receivers of both direct-view and projection types.

The equipment, just received, will remain for the next month at the Signal Corps Center at Ft. Monmouth, where it will be tested by the Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories and where personnel to operate it will be trained.

After it leaves Ft. Monmouth, the equipment will be based at the Signal Corps Photographic Center, Long Island City, N. Y. Its operation will be supervised by the Army Pictorial Service Division of the Office of the Chief Signal Officer.

For some time, the Army has been interested in television for its value as an adjunct to training. Early in 1950 the Signal Corps produced for the Army Field Forces a series of experimental television training programs that were broadcast by a commercial network. The programs were aimed primarily at the Organized Reserve Corps and the National Guard.

L-19 Called "Birdog"

The Army's L-19 observation plane will be known as the "Birdog," a designation chosen by an employee of the Cessna Aircraft Company of Wichita, Kansas, which builds the aircraft.

General Mark W. Clark, Chief, Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., judged the "name-the-plane" contest.

The Army's newest airplane, the "Birdog," is used primarily for artillery observation and other battlefield jobs for combat and support units. It is now in the process of replacing older Army planes in Korea. The all-metal, two-place "Birdog" was chosen in a design competition in the spring of 1950.

Commenting on the new airplane, General Clark said: "The Birdog has been used on the battlefield in many roles that are new to the employment of Army aircraft in warfare, besides the conventional tasks of resupply, wire-laying, courier work of evacuation.

"It locates fords for vehicles by flying low over streams and detecting the tell-tale color of shallow water; it flies high to relay radio messages which ground transmitters cannot send over the sharp Korean ridges and mountains, and it flies flank patrol for armored thrusts into enemy territory."

Army aircraft, flown by Army officers, are now an integral part of the Infantry, Artillery, Armor, Corps of Engineers, Ordnance and Signal Corps.

Defense "Trouble Shooter"

Appointment of Raymond R. Rausch, Vice President of the Willys Overland Motors, Inc. of Toledo, Ohio, as a special consultant and production "trouble-shooter" for the Defense Department Munitions Board is announced by Chairman J. D. Small.

Mr. Rausch, who will serve without compensation, is an outstanding production expert with long experience in the automotive and electrical production fields. He will work closely with the Munitions Board's Vice Chairman for Production and Requirements, Cornelius W. Middleton.

Mr. Rausch is a former director of the Ford Motor Company, and a former vice-president in charge of manufacturing policy for the General Electric Company. He is now Vice President and Executive Assistant to President Ward M. Canaday, of the Willys Overland Company.

Construction Policy Change

Contractors bidding on specified types of Air Force buildings will be permitted to submit alternate forms of construction and design, it was announced by the Department of the Army.

The Corps of Engineers, under Lt. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Army Chief of Engineers, is the constructing agency for both the Army and Air Force.

The policy just announced covers construction bids on airman's dormitories, indoctrines and overseas replacement dormitories, WAF dormitories, and mess and administration buildings. It will permit alternate construction details to be bid in competition with the designs prepared by the Corps of Engineers.

New Interceptor Planned

The Air Force will award contracts to Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp. and Republic Aviation Corp. for further development of designs submitted for a new interceptor aircraft.

Six aircraft manufacturers submitted a total of 12 designs for the preliminary evaluation studies conducted by the Air Force.

The development contracts will call for further elaboration on the designs submitted by the two firms, including the construction of mockups, models, and wind tunnel tests.

Air National Guard

As of 31 July, a total of 47,119 members of the Air National Guard, 6,243 of them officers and 40,876 airmen, were either in Federal service or had been alerted for active duty.

Statistics made available as a result of recent Congressional hearings show that on that date there would be 11,813 Air National Guard personnel remaining in the States after 1 Dec.

CNO Belays Air Power

Chief of Naval Operations William M. Fechteler this week stated that air power alone will not win wars.

"In Korea there has been no appreciable enemy opposition to our use of the air," Admiral Fechteler told the National Women's Press Club, "and though we have had a zone of approximately 150 miles over which our air effort was free to operate, there still has been no effective retardation of the enemy advance by means of air alone, including naval aviation."

The Navy's military head stated that "air attack alone will not stop the advance of the Russian army against Western Europe." He emphasized a belief that "the next war, if it comes, will be fought by persons who will be, and will remain, at or near the scene of action." Admiral Fechteler said the "conventional type of warfare . . . has not become obsolete."

On the other hand, he said he did not mean to leave the impression that he was not "fully conscious of the value of the airplane as a weapon." He said "it is of great importance. We must have strength in the air." Current plans, Admiral Fechteler added, "are not negligent of the air. They envision its use in many roles,—strategic bombing of the enemy's hinterland, close tactical support of troops, interdiction of supply routes, and anti-submarine warfare."

Brig. Gen. Donald B. Smith, USAF, has succeeded Brig. Gen. David H. Baker, USAF, as commanding general of Ladd AFB, Alaska. General Smith previously was a member of the faculty at the National War College in Washington, D. C.

Seeks "Force Admirals"

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me.) has introduced a bill to create "the grade of force admiral in the Navy and Coast Guard as a commissioned officer grade ranking between the grades of vice admiral and rear admiral" and would "abolish the classification of rear admirals as rear admirals upper half and lower half."

This legislation is a substitute for a bill introduced by Senator Smith in January to provide for the creation of the grade of commodore between the grade of captain and rear admiral, the divisions of lower and upper half being abolished among the rear admirals. An adverse report from the Department of Defense has resulted in no action being taken on that bill.

By the terms of the current bill, retired rear admirals whose pay is based on the active duty pay of rear admirals of the upper half would be transferred on the retired list to the grade of force admiral.

To provide for the new classification, the bill provides that "On and after the effective date of this Act, the authorized numbers of rear admirals on the active lists of the Navy and Coast Guard are decreased by 50 per centum and there are authorized to be on such lists numbers of force admirals equal to the decreases in the numbers of rear admirals authorized to be on such lists."

The insignia of rank of rear admirals would become one star, and that of force admirals would be two stars.

U. S. COAST GUARD

CAPT. Edward H. Thiele, USCG, who has been serving as Chief of the Administrative Management Division at Coast Guard Headquarters since 1941, has been named to succeed Capt. G. A. Littlefield, USCG, as head of the Merchant Marine Inspection and Investigation details in Europe. His headquarters will be in London.

Captain Thiele, well-known as an expert in ship engineering and design, is the brother of Brig. Gen. Claude M. Thiele, USA-Ret., who lives at Lake Wales, Fla.

Capt. Thomas Writes Book

Dedicated "to the world's three outstanding Ice Admirals," Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd, USN-Ret., Rear Adm. Edward H. Smith, USCG-Ret., and Rear Adm. Richard H. Cruzen, USN-Ret., a book by an outstanding Coast Guard officer was published yesterday by The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Inc., 468 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

Written by Capt. Charles W. Thomas, USCG, Ice Is Where You Find It (378 pages, $4.50) tells with authoritative detail and dramatic impact the story of six polar expeditions. The book contains many illustrations and has a detailed index.

The introduction to Ice Is Where You Find It is written by Admiral Byrd, who describes Captain thusly:

"The author of this book has a notable record. Aside from being a top ice navigator and Coast Guard officer, Captain Thomas is a capable marine engineer, sea-fighter, diplomat and scientist. His versatility is amazing. But what in this connection surprised me most was to learn of his talents as a writer on subjects other than professional ones. I think Ice Is Where You Find It proves my point. It is a fascinating book."

In the book, Captain Thomas relates his experiences aboard an icebreaker in Greenland during the early war years, and affords the reader a moving and definitive chronology of the inception and growing pains of the Coast Guard's super-ice-breakers Eastwind and Northwind. He, moreover, recounts in particularly dramatic fashion his participation as commanding officer of the lead ice-breaker in the joint expeditions to the arctic and antarctic—the latter the subject of the recent motion picture "Secret Land." This film won the Academy Award.

FRANK M. FOLSOM

President, Radio Corporation of America

*"We are adding thousands
upon thousands . . ."*

"By a simple person-to-person canvass, we are adding thousands upon thousands of serious savers to our Payroll Savings Plan. Our employees are eager to contribute to the strengthening of America's defenses while they build their own security. They know that individual saving initiative means a blow at ruinous inflation. They know that is the line on which all of us at home can make our strongest fight."

"Thirty days has September." And every one of these September days is a D Day. In newspapers . . . magazines . . . over the radio . . . from the television screen . . . on billboards . . . contributed advertising will urge every American to "Make today your D Day. Buy U.S. Defense Bonds."

September days are "D" Days for management, too—Decision Days.

If you have a Payroll Savings Plan and your employee participation is less than 50% . . . or if you have not made a person-to-person canvass recently—consider this your "D" Day.

Phone, wire or write to Savings Bond Division, U. S. Treasury Department, Suite 700, Washington Building,

Washington, D. C. Your State Director will show you how easy it is to increase your employee participation to 70%, 80%—even 90%—by a simple person-to-person canvass that places an application blank in the hands of every employee. He will furnish you with application blanks, promotional material, practical suggestions and all the personal assistance you may desire.

Your employees, like those of the Radio Corporation of America and many other companies will join by the hundreds or thousands because they, too, are eager to contribute to the strengthening of America's defenses while they build their own security. Make it very easy for them—through the automatic Payroll Savings Plan.

The U. S. Government does not pay for this advertising. The Treasury Department thanks, for their patriotic donation, the Advertising Council and Army Navy Air Force Journal.
